KUHN ARRESTED ON GRAND LARCENY CHARGE

No Hope for Any of Crew On Squalus

Divers Find only Compartment Where 26 Missing Could Be Is Entirely Filled with Water

Admiral Cole Suspends Salvage Operations Pending Decision as to How to Refloat Ship

Portsmouth, N. H., May 25 (AP)—Salvage operations on the sunken submarine Squalus were suspended suddenly tonight pending a definite decision upon further salvage procedure.

Admiral C. W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth navy yard and director of rescue and salvage operations, came ashore tonight and immediately went into conference with his technical staff to formulate a definite salvage program.

Even before the admiral landed to announce a temporary cessation of operations, the last faint ray of hope for the 26 still aboard the Squalus definitely was abandoned.

Now Up to Washington

Navy officials said there would be no announcemeent here tonight of any plans drawn up at the meeting of technicians. Any future course, they added, would have to be approved by the bureau of operations at Washington.

Divers had worked through some hours of darkness beneath the searchlights of a fleet of vessels before "time out" was called, apparently to determine the best means of salvage.

Just as dusk fell, the diving bell in which 33 were saved yesterday ascended once more to bring word that the only compartment where life might exist was filled with water.

Torpedo Room Filled

"Opened after hatch. Found torpedo room flooded. Closed hatch."

With these words the fate of those left behind was sealed.

Almost simultaneously, a ranking officer reported that the quickest possible job would be made of moving the submarine.

One plan, he said, was to pump enough air into the ship to enable her to be pulled along the bottom to shallow water, where more divers could work simultaneously under less pressure.

The officer added, however, that if the air gave the Squalus enough buoyance to bring her completely to the surface, the craft would be taken immediately to the drydock at the Portsmouth navy yards. Only seven or eight hours would be required for the move, he said. Once the preliminaries were accomplished and barring difficulties.

His words confirmed earlier reports that only a few if any of the bodies now entombed in the Squalus would be removed before drydock is reached.

Diving Bell Lowered

Just before sunset, the huge diving bell in which 33 men were rescued so dramatically yesterday was plunged once more through the 240 feet of ocean water to the after deck of the Squalus, carrying other divers to assist those already at work. Soon thereafter, the nine ships in the salvage fleet unlimbered their searchlights to illuminate the picturesque post-rescue scene.

Thus ended a day in which grim and vivid, but heroic stories were told of the harrowing hours passed by the 33 survivors between the time the Squalus sank at 8:40 a. m. (EST) on Tuesday until their rescue yesterday.

Lieutenant O. F. Naquin, commander of the ill-fated submarine, revealed grimly this afternoon that 26 men trapped in the after compartmenets had met a mercifully swift death under the tons of icy water that poured into the craft,

Fred Snite, Jr. Reaches Lourdes In His Iron Lung

Stricken American Youth Is Met by Large Crowd of Tourists

Lourdes, France, May 25 (AP)—Fred B. Snite, Jr., 28-year old sufferer from infantile paralysis, arrived today in his iron lung at the "Grotto of Miracles," the end of a 5,000-mile pilgrimage from the United States.

The Chicagoan's father said the trip was a "thanks offering" for his son's three years of life in a mechanical respirator as much as a "prayer for another miracle." Young Snite was afflicted three years ago while in China.

The indomitable "man in the iron lung," usually smiling and joking, grew serious as he approached the goal of his long pilgrimage. As he entered the grotto made famous by Bernadette Soubiroux, French peasant girl who became a saint, his face was set and anxious.

The entrance of his streamlined trailer in which he crossed France from Le Havre disrupted the conclusion of the open air mass celebrated each afternoon.

Hundreds Greet Him

Hundreds of pilgrims from all parts of the world crowded around the respirator, clamoring greetings in many languages.

The trailer rolled smoothly through the court in front of the Church of the Rosary, under which the grotto is situated.

Pilgrims in good health, either at Lourdes for religious consolation or as companions of infirm relatives and friends, broke from their procession to push as close as possible to the trailer, crossing themselves and murmuring prayers and salutations.

Crabbe Reelected Head Of Anti-Saloon League; Demands Local Option

Baltimore, May 25 (AP)—George W. Crabbe, re-elected for his twenty-second year as superintendent of the Maryland Anti-Saloon League, demanded local option legislation today.

Crabbe told the board of trustees that there must be legislation to keep pace with public sentiment of local communities.

William F. Cochran was re-elected president and J. H. Baker again was named vice president. A. S. Dulany, treasurer, H. E. Corner, secretary, C. H. Gundersdorf, William Burnet Wright, George R. Morris and the Rev. L. B. Smith were named to the Headquarters Committee.

Crabbe said he believed many counties would vote out taverns and roadhouses if given an opportunity by the legislature.

"Public sentiment is rapidly changing our way," the veteran league superintendent declared.

Paderewski Suffers Slight Heart Attack

New York, May 25. (AP)—Ignace Jan Paderewski, 78, the famous pianist and former premier of Poland, suffered a heart attack tonight which caused cancellation of his scheduled concert appearance in Madison Square Garden.

In announcing the cancellation, concert officials described the attack as "slight".

Paderewski became ill at the start of his current American tour but recovered and traveled across the country giving concerts with much of his old-time finesse.

Three Men Admit Participating in Insurance Murders

Many Others To Face Trial in Sensational Cases

Philadelyhia, May 25 (AP)—Three men admitted a part in the East's widespread insurance-murder plots today, while seven other defendants—two of them widows of poison victims—pleaded innocent and will stand trial on murder charges.

The ten men and women, herded into a crowded city hall courtroom for the largest group murder-charge arraignment in the memory of veteran court attaches, answered indictments in half as many deaths.

Only one of the three who pleaded guilty played a major part in the plots, investigators said. They termed the other two relatively minor characters in a "get-rich-quick" scheme they estimated took 50 to 100 lives. Among those who pleaded innocent, Paul Petrillo, a bald little tailor, was pictured as the most important.

The spectacular charges against the group contrasted srarply with the appearance of the defendants. The women looked no different than the average seen in shopping crowds. Most of the men needed shaves and wore rumpled clothes.

17 Others In Custody

After the arraignments, a hearing was held for a man and two widows—one of them a new figure in the investigation. Seventeen other persons are in custody, including two women who have been indicted on murder changes in their husbands' deaths. One man has been convicted of first-degree murder and faces the electric chair.

Thrice-widowed Rose Carina, held on a charge of poisoning a common-law mate, was under guard in a hospital. Police Captain James A. Kelly said Mrs. Carina refused food and water for three days to protest her arrest. She was captued in New York last week by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Officers denied a report that "Dark Rose," as police call her, smashed her spectacles and swallowed glass in a suicide attempt. Another widow in police custody tried to shoot herself several weeks ago.

The men who pleaded guilty will be given hearings before a three-judge court which will hear evidence and fix punishment. They are: Morhis Bolber, Samuel Sortino and Rafael Polselli.

Prosecutors said they would bring to trial soon, perhaps in groups, those who pleaded innocent. They are: Mrs. Agnes Mandiuk, Mrs. Christina Cerrone, Mrs. Josephine Romauldo, David Brandt, Amedeo Muscelli, Caesare Valenti and Paul Petrillo.

Bolber, accused with Mrs. Mandiuk and Brandt of murdering her husband, formerly kept a Brooklyn delicatessen store. His previous business, investigators declare, was running one Philadelphia branch of the murder "corporation."

Tarquinio Gets Life In Prison

Baltimore, May 25 (AP)—Aurelio Marco Tarquinio, squat, swarthy steelworker who killed and dismembered Evelyn Rice, 31, his housekeeper, was sentenced to life imprisonment late today.

Judges Emory H. Niles, Rowland K. Adams and Edwin T. Dickerson, sitting without a jury, earlier found him guilty of first degree murder in the death of the Georgia divorcee, one-time beauty contest winner.

His confession, admitted in evidence yesterday over defense objections, related that: "I get little mad—start cutting piece and piece."

Tarquinio related to police officers that the woman sought to kill him while she was drunk. He said he grabbed the knife she was brandishing, knocked her down the basement steps, dragged her body into the back yard, and there carved the corpse into small pieces.

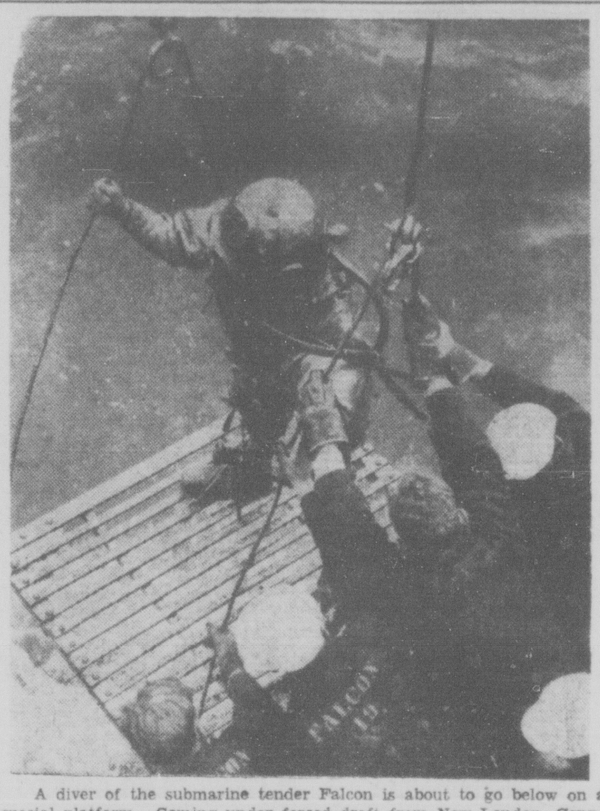
The case "broke" April 15, a day after the murder, when a small boy crawled into a sewer manhole after his baseball and found a severed hand. Officers found the murdered woman's head carefully buried under a concrete slab in Tarquinio's neat rose garden.

Aged Woman Drowns

Bristol, Va., May 25 (AP)—An 83-year-old woman was drowned late today as a cloudburst sent small streams out of their banks and flooded large areas of Russell county.

Mrs. Olive Statzer, caught in the swirling flood waters of Carr's creek in front of her home at Balton was swept away.

HELPED SAVE MANY ON SQUALUS



A diver of the submarine tender Falcon is about to go below on a special platform. Coming under forced draft from New London, Conn., the Falcon rushed to aid of the stricken submarine Squalus, off Portsmouth, N. H., bringing with it some of the Navy's newest submarine rescue devices.

Witness Says Manton Took $25,000 But Later Refused to Set Him Free

Ex-Convict is Voluble Witness at Trial of Judge

New York, May 25 (AP)—Morris Renkoff, ex-convict, told the U. S. district court today that he helped arrange a $25,000 payment for Former U. S. Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton in a patent case, but that later Manton was one of the judges who refused to free him from a bond theft conspiracy charge.

The government, prosecuting Manton on an indictment for conspiracy to obstruct justice, then introduced a letter from Manton to the U. S. attorney general, suggesting the possibility of clemency for Renkoff because there was "some doubt" as to his guilt in receiving stolen securities in 1936.

Renkoff was paroled from the Lewisburg, Pa., federal reformatory last April 7.

He said he had given $7,500 to a "Charlie Rich" to try to win his appeal, but it was returned with word that the other judges would not "go along" with Manton for a reversal.

"Who is this Charlie Rich?" inquired Judge W. Calvin Chesnut.

"The fixer for Judge Manton," replied Renkoff.

As the courtroom spectators laughed, one of Manton's lawyers, Benjamin Golder, remarked, "Charlie didn't fix your case very well, did he?"

Strawberry Pickers Get High Prices

Salisbury, May 25 (AP)—Strawberry pickers mined red gold today when the price was doubled in the morning bidding.

A cold wave which swept the peninsula yesterday retarded ripening of the fruit, and buyers feared the supply would be short for several days. Demand was briskest since the season opened.

Many shore markets reported 24-quart crates were selling at $4 and over, with the average well over $3.

Townsend Bill Not Clear to Rep. Fish

Washington, May 25 (AP) — The Townsend Old Age Pension Bill came to a temporary halt in its journey toward a House vote today after Representative Fish (R-NY) questioned the meaning of the following provision in the measure

"Throughout the act the present tense includes the past and future tenses; and the future, the present. The masculine gender includes the feminine and neuter."

Soon aftr the laughter subsided, the Rules Committee broke up without acting on procedure for sending the bill to the house floor for a vote.

Martin Takes Hand In Briggs Strike

Detroit, May 25 (AP)—The appearance of the head of the Independent United Automobile Workers while the Briggs Manufacturing Co., was discussing a strike settlement with the Congress of Industrial Organizations division of the union complicated the negotiations tonight.

Homer Martin, president of the UAW which is balloting on affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, said he had arrived uninvited to talk over a contract with the management. He was closeted with company representatives as soon as the CIO delegation, accompanied by federal labor conciliator James F. Dewey departed.

The CIO faction, headed by R. J. Thomas, called the strike Monday after breaking off negotiations with the company on a list of alleged grievances and contract renewal.

The strike made more than 70,000 employes of Briggs and Companies dependent upon it for parts idle.

Free Lance Miners Protest Bill To Fix Output Quotas in Penna.

Harrisburg, May 25. (AP)—The free-lance miners of Pennsylvania's hard coal region descended upon the state capitol today in loud and stormy protest over a bill that would fix production quotas, spread out employment over the area and, in their belief, end independent mining.

The proposal held the endorsement of most major coal operators and also of Governor James, a native of the anthracite section. Its aim was to stabilize employment in the area where free-lance mining grew when depression years shut down many collieries.

Wearing mining caps, most of the men in the delegation, variously estimated from 600 to 1,000, looked as though they stepped from a coal hole into the truck caravan which brought them here.

They poured into the ratunda of the capitol, made speeches and threats. State police manned the doors of the legislature.

The Senate Mines and Mining Committee was considering the production bill in closed session. Suddenly Chairman J. Fred Thomas threw the meeting open as a public hearing although the mass meeting of the miners remained outside.

Meanwhile the Senate, minus the 14 members of the committee, met but could do little business.

Charles F. Huber, chairman of the board of the Glen Alden Coal Company, Scranton, defended the bill.

"Without legislation of this kind, the industry will be right back where it was," he warned. "This is not designed to put the independent operator out of business. It does reasonably distribute the working time of people in the industry."

Hero of Submarine Tragedy Tells of Deaths of Friends

Lloyd B. Maness Describes How He Shut Door To Save 32

Portsmouth, N. H., May 25 (AP)—The heart-rending task of closing a watertight compartment door, a door that closed the avenue of life to 26 shipmates, a door that meant his best friend would drown, a door that shut out swift death for 32 others—that was the appalling duty of Electrician's Mate Lloyd B. Maness as the submarine Squalus sank to the ocean's bottom last Tuesday.

True to navy discipline, he did it, and, he added grimly today, "I'd do the same thing again if circumstances required."

During the day, survivor after survivor had named the boyish-looking Maness, still in his early twenties, as the hero of the disaster, the hero who with superhuman effort had slammed the door against the inrushing water. But Maness grieved for his pal, Sherman Shirley, of Little Rock, Arkansas, who was somewhere on the other side of that fateful barrier.

Shirley Planned Marriage

"My chum," Maness said when he spoke of Shirley today, "my chum, whose best man I was to be next Sunday." For Shirley was to have been married on May 28—to Ruth Desautel in Dover, N. H.

Wistfully, he recalled, "I had talked to him just before our final dive—something to do with Sunday's wedding. When I had time to think, I hoped that Shirley was fortunate enough to be in a dry section, though the hope was pretty remote."

Dark-haired, of medium height and build, just an average-looking young enlisted man, Maness was credited today by his chief, Lieutenant Oliver F. Naquin, commander of the stricken submarine, with being "the man to whom I owe my life, and so also do all of the other men who were in the control room."

Clad in pajamas and bathrobe, and wrapped in a blanket, Maness, whose home is Greensboro, N. C., sat in the Portsmouth naval hospital this afternoon and told how "I was in charge of the bulkhead door between the control room and the after battery."

Took All His Strength

"The water was rising rapidly in the after compartment," he said, "and I realized that time was short if I was to close the door. Due to the down angle of the ship and the fact that the door opened from a down angle, I had to exert all my strength to swing it into place."

The door was partly closed when shouts came from the rapidly filling battery room, "Keep it open! Keep it open!" And Maness let the door slip back. Raymond O'Hara of Elmira, N. Y., Roland Blanchard of Hersey, Mich., William Isaacs of Washington, William Boulton of Luton, Iowa, and Robert Washburn of Greenwich, Ohio, swiftly crowded through.

"Immediately, I swung the door

Murray Guilty of $111,000 Robbery

Pittsburgh, May 25. (AP)—A federal jury that deliberated 25 minutes today convicted James Murray, 52-year-old Chicago bodyguard, of the $111,000 robbery of the Peoples National Bank of Clintonville, Pa., October 14, 1938.

Murray who served a prison term for the $2,000,000 Roundout, Ill., mail train robbery in 1924, took the verdict calmly. His counsel announced he was considering a motion for a new trial.

Two men, George Slade and John Dorsch, who are accused of aiding Murray in the daylight hold-up, sat grimly behind the tow-headed defendant as the verdict was read. Slade pleaded guilty to the robbery but Dorsch denied, like Murray, ever having been in the Vennango county community.

Sentencing of Murray and Slade was deferred pending filing of motion for a new trial. Assistant United States Attorney John Ray said he would seek reindictment of Dorsch who was named as "John Doe." Slade is serving a long term in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., for bank robberies in Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Dorsch is serving a 20-year sentence in the Joliet, Ill., prison for being an habitual criminal.

Bund Leader Caught in Pa. After Chase

Fritz Kuhn

"Just a Common Thief", Dewey Says after His Indictment and Sudden Flight

Charged with Stealing $14,589, Part of Which Belonged to German-American Unit

New York, May 25 (AP)—Fritz Kuhn, leader of the pro-Nazi German American Bund, was arrested late today by New York detectives in Krumsville, Pa., to answer a hastily returned indictment charging forgery and grand larceny involving $14,589.59.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey accused the bundsfuehrer of being "just a common thief" and expressed a belief that he was fleeing when overtaken by Dewey detectives.

The New York county prosecutor disclosed that three detectives shadowed Kuhn all day, planning to take him into custody as soon as the 12-count indictment could be filed.

It was handed up to general sessions Judge Cornelius F. Collins at 3 p. m., and a warrant for his arrest was made out 15 minutes later.

The detectives telephoned for instructions at 5:45 o'clock and made the arrest within a few minutes. They told Dewey they trailed Kuhn and three other men in a motor car to the Pennsylvania town.

Asked whether he believed Kuhn was trying to escape, Dewey replied "it looked that way."

Said to Have Robbed Bund

The indictment detailed the alleged theft of $8,907.35 from the bund and charged misappropriation of funds from a bund rally at Madison Square Garden last February 20—a meeting which resulted in only one minor disorder while virtually the entire police force stood ready to quell any trouble.

Two counts of the indictment charged the theft of $4,424.22 from funds raised to defend bund members who were convicted at Riverhead, N. Y., of neglect to file with the state records of its official personnel.

The detectives told Dewey that Kuhn's car stopped at Krumsville for gasoline and that three trunks were loaded into it there. Dewey said traveling bags had been picked up at three separate stops in New York earlier in the day by Kuhn and his companions, who were not immediately identified.

Asks Heavy Bail

Dewey, declaring conviction on all counts could result in maximum prison terms totaling 50 years, said he wound ask that bail be fixed at $10,000 when Kuhn is taken before a magistrate in Hamburg, Pa., to determine extradition proceedings.

Kuhn's departure came two days after he was called before a grand jury here but was excused upon refusal to waive immunity.

Four counts in the indictment charge the theft of $565.76 in bund funds set aside supposedly for transportation of furniture for one Mrs. Florence Camp from Los Angeles to New York and the theft of $151.26 for bringing her furniture here from Cleveland. Mrs. Camp was described as a friend of Kuhn's.

Hopkins To Seek Ways To Increase Our Import Trade

Secretary of Commerce To Ask Advice of Group Of Specialists

New York, May 25 (AP) — Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins said tonight he planned to assign a group of specialists to "explore intensively the possibility of increasing our import trade."

In a speech prepared for a world trade dinner, the secretary declared this country's billion-dollar export balance of last year—the surplus in dollar value of goods sent out over goods brought in—"did not represent a wholesome situation."

He added that "sound and desirable" as was the trade agreements program of Secretary of State Hull, "we must be prepared to supplement it as need arises."

Hopkins spoke before one of the largest groups of industrial leaders of this and other countries ever assembled here. The invited guests included some 1,500, including trade groups representing 52 countries.

Saying that an export balance such as last year's was "no matter for self-congratulation," Hopkins remarked that "unless we buy from other countries their purchasing power for American products cannot be definitely sustained and will probably shrink again."

The United States, he said, still was the largest exporting nation, "but we are only in third place as an importing nation. x x x the import side of our foreign trade has not received, in my judgment, the attention which it deserves."

The projected board of specialists, Hopkins added, "would seek foreign products which would not compete unduly with products of the United States, and which could be used advantageously by our industries or consumers."

O'Conor Urges Maryland Women To Keep State Democratic in 1940

Washington, May 25 (AP)—Governor Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland urged 700 members of the United Democratic Women's Club of Maryland today to apply their influences and efforts to keep the state "in the Democratic column" in the 1940 elections.

Mrs. Henry F. Grady, national Democratic committeewoman of California, told club members at the Congressional Country Club meeting that WPA expenditures were "peace insurance."

"Instead of spending money on gas and bombs we have spent it on food and housing, accomplishing our aim in the American pioneer way," she said. Referring to the problem of "social restlessness," she continued:

"I have seen what the totalitarian states have done to satisfy this restlessness. People of those states have been made part of a war machine. They have been satisfied because they have the privilege of shooting beside their fellow man. We have achieved the same thing through social legislation, through men standing beside each other but providing for social welfare."

Waives Extradition

Reading, Pa., May 25. (AP)—Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American bund, waived extradition tonight on charges of forgery and grand larceny, and immediately left the West Reading state police barracks for New York in the custody of New York City police officials.

New York detectives had trailed him into Pennsylvania by automobile this afternoon as a grand jury considered the charges against him.

Two Girls Attacked By Unknown Men

Elkins, W. Va., May 25 (AP)—Police held one man tonight and were searching for another after a 17-year old girl reported she had been attacked and another said in attempt had been made to assault her.

Police Captain F. E. Phillips said the girls told him they were accosted near a carnival last night. One man was arrested after a passerby heard the girls screaming and notified police.

City Physician A. M. Fredlock said one of the girls had been attacked and assault attempted on the other.

Tarquinio Gets Life In Prison

Baltimore, May 25 (AP)—Aurelio Marco Tarquinio, squat, swarthy steelworker who killed and dismembered Evelyn Rice, 31, his housekeeper, was sentenced to life imprisonment late today.

Judges Emory H. Niles, Rowland K. Adams and Edwin T. Dickerson, sitting without a jury, earlier found him guilty of first degree murder in the death of the Georgia divorcee, one-time beauty contest winner.

His confession, admitted in evidence yesterday over defense objections, related that: "I get little mad—start cutting piece and piece."

Tarquinio related to police officers that the woman sought to kill him while she was drunk. He said he grabbed the knife she was brandishing, knocked her down the basement steps, dragged her body into the back yard, and there carved the corpse into small pieces.

The case "broke" April 15, a day after the murder, when a small boy crawled into a sewer manhole after his baseball and found a severed hand. Officers found the murdered woman's head carefully buried under a concrete slab in Tarquinio's neat rose garden.

Aged Woman Drowns

Bristol, Va., May 25 (AP)—An 83-year-old woman was drowned late today as a cloudburst sent small streams out of their banks and flooded large areas of Russell county.

Mrs. Olive Statzer, caught in the swirling flood waters of Carr's creek in front of her home at Balton was swept away.

Witness Says Manton Took $25,000 But Later Refused to Set Him Free

Ex-Convict is Voluble Witness at Trial of Judge

New York, May 25 (AP)—Morris Renkoff, ex-convict, told the U. S. district court today that he helped arrange a $25,000 payment for Former U. S. Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton in a patent case, but that later Manton was one of the judges who refused to free him from a bond theft conspiracy charge.

The government, prosecuting Manton on an indictment for conspiracy to obstruct justice, then introduced a letter from Manton to the U. S. attorney general, suggesting the possibility of clemency for Renkoff because there was "some doubt" as to his guilt in receiving stolen securities in 1936.

Renkoff was paroled from the Lewisburg, Pa., federal reformatory last April 7.

He said he had given $7,500 to a "Charlie Rich" to try to win his appeal, but it was returned with word that the other judges would not "go along" with Manton for a reversal.

"Who is this Charlie Rich?" inquired Judge W. Calvin Chesnut.

"The fixer for Judge Manton," replief Renkoff.

As the courtroom spectators laughed, one of Manton's lawyers, Benjamin Golder, remarked, "Charlie didn't fix your case very well, did he?"

Strawberry Pickers Get High Prices

Salisbury, May 25 (AP)—Strawberry pickers mined red gold today when the price was doubled in the morning bidding.

A cold wave which swept the peninsula yesterday retarded ripening of the fruit, and buyers feared the supply would be short for several days. Demand was briskest since the season opened.

Many shore markets reported 24-quart crates were selling at $4 and over, with the average well over $3.

Townsend Bill Not Clear to Rep. Fish

Washington, May 25 (AP) — The Townsend Old Age Pension Bill came to a temporary halt in its journey toward a House vote today after Representative Fish (R-NY) questioned the meaning of the following provision in the measure

"Throughout the act the present tense includes the past and future tenses; and the future, the present. The masculine gender includes the feminine and neuter."

Soon aftr the laughter subsided, the Rules Committee broke up without acting on procedure for sending the bill to the house floor for a vote.

Martin Takes Hand In Briggs Strike

Detroit, May 25 (AP)—The appearance of the head of the Independent United Automobile Workers while the Briggs Manufacturing Co., was discussing a strike settlement with the Congress of Industrial Organizations division of the union complicated the negotiations tonight.

Homer Martin, president of the UAW which is balloting on affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, said he had arrived uninvited to talk over a contract with the management. He was closeted with company representatives as soon as the CIO delegation, accompanied by federal labor conciliator James F. Dewey departed.

The CIO faction, headed by R. J. Thomas, called the strike Monday after breaking off negotiations with the company on a list of alleged grievances and contract renewal.

The strike made more than 70,000 employes of Briggs and Companies dependent upon it for parts idle.

Free Lance Miners Protest Bill To Fix Output Quotas in Penna.

Harrisburg, May 25. (AP)—The free-lance miners of Pennsylvania's hard coal region descended upon the state capitol today in loud and stormy protest over a bill that would fix production quotas, spread out employment over the area and, in their belief, end independent mining.

The proposal held the endorsement of most major coal operators and also of Governor James, a native of the anthracite section. Its aim was to stabilize employment in the area where free-lance mining grew when depression years shut down many collieries.

Wearing mining caps, most of the men in the delegation, variously estimated from 600 to 1,000, looked as though they stepped from a coal hole into the truck caravan which brought them here.

They poured into the ratunda of the capitol, made speeches and threats. State police manned the doors of the legislature.

The Senate Mines and Mining Committee was considering the production bill in closed session. Suddenly Chairman J. Fred Thomas threw the meeting open as a public hearing although the mass meeting of the miners remained outside.

Meanwhile the Senate, minus the 14 members of the committee, met but could do little business.

Charles F. Huber, chairman of the board of the Glen Alden Coal Company, Scranton, defended the bill.

"Without legislation of this kind, the industry will be right back where it was," he warned. "This is not designed to put the independent operator out of business. It does reasonably distribute the working time of people in the industry."

Hero of Submarine Tragedy Tells of Deaths of Friends

Lloyd B. Maness Describes How He Shut Door To Save 32

Portsmouth, N. H., May 25 (AP)—The heart-rending task of closing a watertight compartment door, a door that closed the avenue of life to 26 shipmates, a door that meant his best friend would drown, a door that shut out swift death for 32 others—that was the appalling duty of Electrician's Mate Lloyd B. Maness as the submarine Squalus sank to the ocean's bottom last Tuesday.

True to navy discipline, he did it, and, he added grimly today, "I'd do the same thing again if circumstances required."

During the day, survivor after survivor had named the boyish-looking Maness, still in his early twenties, as the hero of the disaster, the hero who with superhuman effort had slammed the door against the inrushing water. But Maness grieved for his pal, Sherman Shirley, of Little Rock, Arkansas, who was somewhere on the other side of that fateful barrier.

Shirley Planned Marriage

"My chum," Maness said when he spoke of Shirley today, "my chum, whose best man I was to be next Sunday." For Shirley was to have been married on May 28—to Ruth Desautel in Dover, N. H.

Wistfully, he recalled, "I had talked to him just before our final dive—something to do with Sunday's wedding. When I had time to think, I hoped that Shirley was fortunate enough to be in a dry section, though the hope was pretty remote."

Dark-haired, of medium height and build, just an average-looking young enlisted man, Maness was credited today by his chief, Lieutenant Oliver P. Naquin, commander of the stricken submarine, with being "the man to whom I owe my life, and so also do all of the other men who were in the control room."

Clad in pajamas and bathrobe, and wrapped in a blanket, Maness, whose home is Greensboro, N. C., sat in the Portsmouth naval hospital this afternoon and told how "I was in charge of the bulkhead door between the control room and the after battery."

Took All His Strength

"The water was rising rapidly in the after compartment," he said, "and I realized that time was short if I was to close the door. Due to the down angle of the ship and the fact that the door opened from a down angle, I had to exert all my strength to swing it into place."

The door was partly closed when shouts came from the rapidly filling battery room, "Keep it open! Keep it open!" And Maness let the door slip back. Raymond O'Hara of Elmira, N. Y., Roland Blanchard of Hersey, Mich., William Isaacs of Washington, William Boulton of Luton, Iowa, and Robert Washburn of Greenwich, Ohio, swiftly crowded through.

"Immediately, I swung the door

Murray Guilty of $111,000 Robbery

Pittsburgh, May 25. (AP)—A federal jury that deliberated 25 minutes today convicted James Murray, 52-year-old Chicago bodyguard, of the $111,000 robbery of the Peoples National Bank of Clintonville, Pa., October 14, 1938.

Murray who served a prison term for the $2,000,000 Roundout, Ill., mail train robbery in 1924, took the verdict calmly. His counsel announced he was considering a motion for a new trial.

Two men, George Slade and John Dorsch, who are accused of aiding Murray in the daylight hold-up, sat grimly behind the tow-headed defendant as the verdict was read. Slade pleaded guilty to the robbery but Dorsch denied, like Murray, ever having been in the Vennango county community.

Sentencing of Murray and Slade was deferred pending filing of motion for a new trial. Assistant United States Attorney John Ray said he would seek reindictment of Dorsch who was named as "John Doe." Slade is serving a long term in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., for bank robberies in Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Dorsch is serving a 20-year sentence in the Joliet, Ill., prison for being an habitual criminal.

Italians To Leave Spain

Rome, May 25 (AP)—The government announced today that 19,400 Italian soldiers, the last of more than 40,000 admitted officially to have been sent to Spain during the civil war, were to be brought home.

Bund Leader Caught in Pa. After Chase

Fritz Kuhn

"Just a Common Thief", Dewey Says after His Indictment and Sudden Flight

Charged with Stealing $14,589, Part of Which Belonged to German-American Unit

New York, May 25 (AP)—Fritz Kuhn, leader of the pro-Nazi German American Bund, was arrested late today by New York detectives in Krumsville, Pa., to answer a hastily returned indictment charging forgery and grand larceny involving $14,589.59.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey accused the bundsfuehrer of being "just a common thief" and expressed a belief that he was fleeing when overtaken by Dewey detectives.

The New York county prosecutor disclosed that three detectives shadowed Kuhn all day, planning to take him into custody as soon as the 12-count indictment could be filed.

It was handed up to general sessions Judge Cornelius F. Collins at 3 p. m., and a warrant for his arrest was made out 15 minutes later.

The detectives telephoned for instructions at 5:45 o'clock and made the arrest within a few minutes. They told Dewey they trailed Kuhn and three other men in a motor car to the Pennsylvania town.

Asked whether he believed Kuhn was trying to escape, Dewey replied "it looked that way."

Said to Have Robbed Bund

The indictment detailed the alleged theft of $8,907.35 from the bund and charged misappropriation of funds from a bund rally at Madison Square Garden last February 20—a meeting which resulted in only one minor disorder while virtually the entire police force stood ready to quell any trouble.

Two counts of the indictment charged the theft of $4,424.22 from funds raised to defend bund members who were convicted at Riverhead, N. Y., of neglect to file with the state records of its official personnel.

The detectives told Dewey that Kuhn's car stopped at Krumsville for gasoline and that three trunks were loaded into it there. Dewey said traveling bags had been picked up at three separate stops in New York earlier in the day by Kuhn and his companions, who were not immediately identified.

Asks Heavy Bail

Dewey, declaring conviction on all counts could result in maximum prison terms totaling 50 years, said he would ask that bail be fixed at $10,000 when Kuhn is taken before a magistrate in Hamburg, Pa., to determine extradition proceedings.

Kuhn's departure came two days after he was called before a grand jury here but was excused upon refusal to waive immunity.

Four counts in the indictment charge the theft of $565.76 in bund funds set aside supposedly for transportation of furniture for one Mrs. Florence Camp from Los Angeles to New York and the theft of $151.26 for bringing her furniture here from Cleveland. Mrs. Camp was described as a friend of Kuhn's.

Hopkins To Seek Ways To Increase Our Import Trade

Secretary of Commerce To Ask Advice of Group Of Specialists

New York, May 25 (AP) — Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins said tonight he planned to assign a group of specialists to "explore intensively the possibility of increasing our import trade."

In a speech prepared for a world trade dinner, the secretary declared this country's billion-dollar export balance of last year—the surplus in dollar value of goods sent out over goods brought in—"did not represent a wholesome situation."

He added that "sound and desirable" as was the trade agreements program of Secretary of State Hull, "we must be prepared to supplement it as need arises."

Hopkins spoke before one of the largest groups of industrial leaders of this and other countries ever assembled here. The invited guests included some 1,500, including trade groups representing 52 countries.

Saying that an export balance such as last year's was "no matter for self-congratulation," Hopkins remarked that "unless we buy from other countries their purchasing power for American products cannot be definitely sustained and will probably shrink again."

The United States, he said, still was the largest exporting nation, "but we are only in third place as an importing nation. x x x the import side of our foreign trade has not received, in my judgment, the attention which it deserves."

The projected board of specialists, Hopkins added, "would seek foreign products which would not compete unduly with products of the United States, and which could be used advantageously by our industries or consumers."

O'Conor Urges Maryland Women To Keep State Democratic in 1940

Washington, May 25 (AP)—Governor Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland urged 700 members of the United Democratic Women's Club of Maryland today to apply their influences and efforts to keep the state "in the Democratic column" in the 1940 elections.

Mrs. Henry F. Grady, national Democratic committeewoman of California, told club members at the Congressional Country Club meeting that WPA expenditures were "peace insurance."

"Instead of spending money on gas and bombs we have spent it on food and housing, accomplishing our aim in the American pioneer way," she said. Referring to the problem of "social restlessness," she continued:

"I have seen what the totalitarian states have done to satisfy this restlessness. People of those states have been made part of a war machine. They have been satisfied because they have the privilege of shooting beside their fellow man. We have achieved the same thing through social legislation, through men standing beside each other but providing for social welfare."

Waives Extradition

Reading, Pa., May 25. (AP)—Fritz Kuhn, leader of the German-American bund, waived extradition tonight on charges of forgery and grand larceny, and immediately left the West Reading state police barracks for New York in the custody of New York City police officials.

New York detectives had trailed him into Pennsylvania by automobile this afternoon as a grand jury considered the charges against him.

Two Girls Attacked By Unknown Men

Elkins, W. Va., May 25 (AP)—Police held one man tonight and were searching for another after a 17-year old girl reported she had been attacked and another said in attempt had been made to assault her.

Police Captain F. E. Phillips said the girls told him they were accosted near a carnival last night. One man was arrested after a passerby heard the girls screaming and notified police.

City Physician A. M. Fredlock said one of the girls had been attacked and assault attempted on the other.

Lieut. Naquin Praises His Crew for Conduct on Squalus

Portsmouth, N. H., May 25 (AP)—Faced with the same swift death that snuffed out the lives of 26 crew mates, 33 survivors of the sunken submarine Squalus—true to the traditions of the navy—remained calm until rescued from the dank chambers of the submersible.

This was the story told vividly in essence today by Lieutenant Oliver F. Naquin, commander of the Squalus, and other survivors of the stricken undersea craft.

Haggard and tired, Naquin, speaking from a hospital cot revealed for the first time that the men who were trapped in the vessel "met a swift and merciful death."

From the moment the craft began its swift descent until the survivors were rescued, he related, there was no sign of hysteria or disorder aboard the craft.

Praises His Crew

Naquin and others related how Lloyd Maness, an electrician's mate, saved the lives of all who escaped through shutting off—"by superhuman strength"—the door of a flooding compartment; how another alert electrician's mate, "sensing danger in a battery room," prevented an explosion by cutting off a hot switch; and how the entire crew endured cold so intense that it numbed them when they took their hands from under their bunk blankets.

A flat statement that he pulled the proper switch to close open induction valves, and that the signal lights flashing before him indicated the valve had been closed, also was given by Alfred G. Prien, machinist's mate, of San Francisco.

Telling his own story of the tragedy, Lt. Naquin said:

"The lives of the men in the after compartment, in my opinion, were snuffed out immediately by the quantity of incoming water. I knew at once, from the angle we took, that the after compartments were probably completely flooded."

Naquin explained that the vessel first took water after diving and leveling off at 50 feet.

Dropped to Bottom

"We blew all our ballast tanks at once," he said, "and the bow took an up angle of about 30 degrees, and then we dropped to the bottom and remained at an angle of about 11 degrees."

He said that after somebody mentioned the men in the after compartment, he "immediately let it be known that there was to be no further discussion of them. We rationed our Momsen lungs and sent up smoke signals."

Even the civilian observer aboard, Harold C. Preble, acted like a veteran, the commander said, and to prepare for any emergency he was given instructions in the use of the lung.

"There was no gas in the control room at any time," Naquin asserted, "except possibly the carbon dioxide we created by our own breathing."

"Maness, acting speedily and instinctively," he continued, "closed the watertight doors, shutting off the after compartment and keeping the water out of the control room. It was a job that required superhuman strength because of our up angle and the pressure of the water pouring into the after compartment."

Theodore Jacobs, of Staten Island, a signalman, credited Lawrence Gainor, of Honolulu, with preventing a devastating explosion aboard the sinking craft.

Prevented Explosion

"Gainor and I were in the forward battery room when the chief sensed some danger there," he said. "He went down and threw the big knife switch. The connectors on the battery were hot. When he pulled that switch he prevented an explosion."

An indication that Commander Naquin's thoughts were only for the welfare of his men came from Raymond E. O'Hara of Elmira, N. Y., a machinist's mate, who said the commander "gave one of the men his overcoat."

"He was the only man then who didn't have an overcoat," O'Hara said, "and believe me it was plenty cold down there."

entrance to the grotto near the Pau river as his caravan pulled slowly up before the infirmary. He was given a corner room nearest to the grotto, into which his "iron lung" was pushed gently up a sloping ramp.

Attendants said Snite would undergo general medical treatments before visiting the grotto.

Then he probably will be wheeled in the respirator to the "fountain of miracles" which Saint Bernadette is said to have started by scraping the grotto floor with her hands after she had been instructed by an apparition of the Virgin Mary.

Bergdoll Taken Into Custody on Board the Bremen

Draft Dodger Removed to Governor's Island by Army Officers

By JOHN FERRIS

New York, May 25. (AP)—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, World war draft dodger, returned voluntarily to the United States today to face the punishment he evaded 19 years ago when he escaped military custody and fled to Germany.

He was arrested on the North German Lloyd liner Bremen by military intelligence officers who had been told in advance that he was a passenger. Before the ship docked he was hustled aboard a customs cutter, taken to Governor's Island and locked up in disciplinary barracks.

It was on Governor's Island on March 4, 1920—nearly three years after the United States entered the war—that Bergdoll was convicted as a deserter, dishonorably discharged from the army and sentenced to five years in a military prison.

The immediate disposition of his case was not made clear by army officials. Secretary of Labor Perkins had instructed the immigration authorities to give the army precedence in the matter, even though a bill which would exclude Bergdoll from entry into the United States is still pending in Congress.

Bergdoll's wife, Berta, his son, Erwin, 5, and his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, were waiting at the pier with his lawyer, Harry Weinberger. When told of his arrest they left hurriedly in an attempt to see him at Governor's Island.

Bergdoll returned, he said in a minute-and-a-half interview in the children's play-room of the Bremen, because he was homesick, wanted to be with his wife who has announced her desire to become an American citizen, and because he wants his children to be Americans.

Southerner To Name Belle for Annapolis

Annapolis, May 25 (AP)—Unless a midshipman from the deep south crosses the Mason-Dixon line, a southern belle will be the envy of the nation's debutantes as color girl of the regiment of midshipmen during the gay June week ceremonies at the naval academy.

Southern belle stock jumped in June week speculation today when Midshipman Ben Jarvis, from out Freda way in Arkansas, won the right to name "the" girl to present the colors to his company at the formal parade Tuesday.

"Big Ben," star tackle on the 1938 football team, is midshipman commander of the first company, which won the inter-regimental drilling competition. The winning campany carries the colors in the parade.

Selection as color girl is traditionally the most coveted honor that can befall a girl during June week.

Jarvis did not immediately announce his choice. It may well be that Jarvis will go up into Yankee country to name his "OAO" (one and only, in middie dialect) as color girl.

But the odds favor a girl from the Cindy Lou and Scarlet O'Hara belt now that the selection is up to a southerner.

Fire in Coal Mine Burns Four Days

McAndrews, Ky., May 25 (AP)—An emergency crew began closing off a section of the Octavia J. Coal Company mine here which has been burning for four days.

Efforts to extinguish the blaze by pumping water into the mine prove fruitless.

Officials said they believed the fire was started by an arc from a trolley wire which was torn loose in a slate fall.

About 300 miners have been idle for four days.

Keyser Man Jailed For Drunk Driving After Motor Crash

Charges of drunken and reckless driving were placed against a Keyser, W. Va., man early this morning after the car he was driving crashed into another automobile at Baltimore and Mechanic streets.

The man, Robert E. Twigg, 24, was arrested by Officer James Condon and lodged in the city jail following a collision at 12:30 p. m. between his car and that of Leo Adams, 35, of 481 Eastern avenue, Cumberland. No charges were placed against Adams.

The Twigg car, headed south on Mechanic street, struck the Adams car as it proceeded west on Baltimore street. No one was injured.

Opposes Congressional Investigation of Squalus Disaster

Washington, May 25 (AP)—A proposal today for a House investigation of the sinking of the submarine Squalus encountered immediate opposition from Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval Committee.

Representative Flaherty (D-Mass) introduced a resolution authorizing the inquiry and a $5,000 appropriation, saying that it undoubtedly could supplement the navy department's investigation and might "develop something more quickly."

But Vinson, to whose committee the legislation was referred, announced that no action would be taken immediately.

R. E. Clapp, Jr. Named Assistant to Walsh

Baltimore, May 25 (AP) — Robert E. Clapp, Jr., member of the House of Delegates from Frederick county, was appointed an assistant attorney general today to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Charles T. Leviness.

Attorney General William C. Walsh who made the appointment said Clapp would take over his duties June 1.

Clapp, who has maintained a law practice at Frederick, said he would devote his entire time to the new post and was contemplating making his home in Baltimore.

Clapp was elected to the House in the last election. He is a graduate of Washington and Lee University and Harvard University. He was admitted to practice in Maryland in 1934.

President Signs Navy Appropriation Bill

Washington, May 25 (AP)—A $773,049,151 naval appropriation bill, largest in peacetime, received President Roosevelt's signature today, clearing the way for the navy to step up its expansion program to even greater speed.

Included in the appropriation, to be spent during the fiscal year beginning July 1, are funds for starting work on two 45,000-ton battleships—10,000 tons larger than the fleet's present dreadnaughts.

In addition, the measure provides money to start construction on a score of other vessels, to continue work on more than 100 already building, to purchase 500 airplanes and to run the navy during the year.

Wheeling Boy Is Drowning Victim

Wheeling, W. Va., May 25 (AP)—Thirteen-year old Harold Harvey drowned today while swimming in Wheeling creek—the first drowning victim of the season. Firemen recovered the body and worked futily for 40 minutes in an effort to revive the lad.

The youngster was among many who sought relief from the heat, which reached a high of 90 at the weather station Lock 12, one degree higher than any previously recorded this month.

Unofficially the temperature in the city ranged from three to four degrees more.

Dr. Higgenbottom Named Moderator By Presbyterians

Missionary Is First Layman Elected Since 1927

Cleveland, May 285 (AP)—A layman, Dr. Sam Higginbottom, 64, today was elected moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. and its 2,000,000 members.

Dr. Higginbottom, who makes his home nominally in Cleveland although he has spent most of the last 36 years as a missionary in India, was chosen by the church's annual assembly.

He received 496 votes; the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCarthy, Washington, D. C., pastor, 194 and the Rev. Dr. James A. Kelso, president of Pittsburgh's Theological Seminary, 184.

Dr. Higginbottom is the first lay moderator since Dr. Robert E. Speer of New York was elected in 1927. Dr. Higginbottom has been ordained only as an elder in India, where he heads the Allahabad Agricultural Institute. He is a native of Manchester, Eng., and friends said he had never remained in the United States long enough to become a citizen.

Joint Control for Rail And Water Carriers Voted

Washington, May 25. (AP)—By a lop-sided 70 to 6 vote, the Seate approved legislation late today that would place domestic water carriers under the same government controls now imposed on railroads.

The final rollcall gave little evidence of the four days of debate over the bulky 200-page transportation act, which now goes to the House. The dispute was climaxed with a strenuous but futile effort to free waterways from its terms.

Senator Bailey (D-NC), chairman of the commerce committee, protested that putting water carriers under the interstate commerce commission would foster "a monopoly" without "doing the railroads any good."

Mother Who Killed Son Refused Parole

Baltimore, May 25 (AP)—Parole Commissioner Herman Moser declined today to review a parole application filed by Mrs. Hattie Stone, convicted of second degree murder in 1929 for poisoning her 15-year-old son and collecting his $600 insurance policy.

Moser asserted Mrs. Stone's 18-year sentence was "light," and termed her "fortunate" she was not found guilty in the first degree.

Former Parole Commissioner W. David Tilghman, Jr., declined to parole the woman when her application was first filed in 1936. No evidence had been presented, Moser said, to justify a re-hearing.

Mrs. Stone was convicted in Harford county Circuit Court after an autopsy on the body of her son, George, showed traces of poison.

Midshipman To Get Numerous Medals

Annapolis, May 25 (AP) — Midshipman Louis Harry Roddis, Jr., of St. Paul, Minn., will look like a naval outfitting store when he collects his prizes for outstanding proficiency during June week.

Included in his trophies will be a pistol, a telescope, two sets of binoculars, two watches, a sword and a sextant.

Roddis today was announced as the honor man who led the class of 1939 in academic standing. He will receive nine prizes for excelling in various studies.

Midshipman Edward Latimer Beach, Jr., Palo Alto, Cal., was second in the honors standing and Marshal Dunford, Seattle, Wash., placed third.

Undistributed Profits Tax To Be Eliminated

Compromise Plan Seen Likely To Be Adopted Soon

Washington, May 25 (AP) — The much - denounced undistributed profits tax appeared doomed today as word was passed that a compromise plan for revising the revenue laws to encourage business recovery had been approved by Presiden Roosevelt, the treasury and congressional leaders.

The president made no announcement on the subject and Secretary of the Treasury Morganthau merely said that agreement had been reached on a plan that would "definitely" aid recovery. However, high congressional sources said the program called for elimination of the tax.

Leaders in the House and Senate predicted that the entire program, calling for several other changes, would be approved by Congress without much delay. There was, however, some dissent from that statement. Two members of the House Ways and Means Committee, in which tax legislation originates, said emphatically that they expected the House to produce its own revenue bill, regardless of agreements reached elsewhere. They declined to go into detail.

In the Senate, Minority Leader McNary (R-Ore) announced that he would call his Republican colleagues into caucus to determine what the party attitude should be; this would be done, he said, after a bill has been passed by the House, and concrete proposals can be laid before the caucus.

As the revenue law stands now, corporations with a net income of less than $25,000 are taxed at a rate ranging from 12½ to 16 percent, depending on the amount of income. Corporations whose income is more than $25,000 are taxed at 16½ percent if all profit is converted into dividends to stockholders. If a part of the profit is retained, the rate increases proportionately, reaching a maximum of 19 percent if no dividends are declared. This is the undistributed profits tax.

The first point of the compromise plan called for the elimination of this tax on Dec. 31, when it is scheduled to die automatically unless renewed.

In its place, a flat rate of 18 percent would be imposed on corporate income in excess of $25,000.

In addition, the plan contemplates:

Some changes in the present graduated scale of 12½ to 16 per cent on small corporations.

An arrangement to permit some corporations to escape payments otherwise due under the excess profits tax. They would be permitted to revalue their stock upward this year and perhaps annually hereafter in cases where the valuation is now too low. At present such revaluations can be made but once in three years.

A change in the law to permit corporations to spread losses over a three-year period, for taxation purposes, rather than confine them to one year.

See Boost of Payments By Social Security Board

Washington, May 25. (AP)—Experts of the social security board estimated today that pending proposals to revise the security system would increase benefit payments by $1,200,000,000 in the next five years and save employers and workers possibly $1,155,000,000 in taxes.

About $1,755,000,000 in benefits, they said, would be disbursed by the old age insurance system during 1940-1944 under the legislation proposed by the House ways and means committee. This would compare with about $555,000,000 which they estimated would be spent over the same period under the present law.

Britain Hopes To Speed Pact with Soviet Regime

Chamberlain Notifies Russia of His Good Intentions

London, May 25 (AP) — The British government notified Soviet Russia today of its readiness to speed negotiations designed to make her a member of the British-French front and prepared to send more detailed proposals for a mutual aid pact in a few days.

British officials expressed hope the proposals would be accepted by the Soviet government as the basis for a British-French-Russian declaration of mutual assistance until a formal pact could be concluded.

They did not disclose the details of the proposals but responsible quarters said they included:

1. A mutual assistance pact which would come into operation in the event of direct aggression upon the European territories of any one of the three signatories. (A conflict between Russia and Japan would be outside the scope of such a pact.)

2. Provision for consultation in the event of direct aggression upon territories of any state guaranteed by the three signatories.

3. Consultations among general staffs of the three powers to insure eficient collaboration if the signatories were called into action.

Chamberlain Confident

Which states would receive aid from the three powers has not yet been determined. This was one of the "details" to which Prime Minister Chamberlain referred yesterday as not yet cleared up. He expressed a belief, however, that no differences likely would arise.

Today's note advising Russia of Britain's position called attention to yesterday's action of the cabinet, which officials indicated approved the general terms of the new proposals, and Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement on the negotiations.

Chamberlain then announced the British government was making new proposals and he had every reason to hope it would be possible to "reach full agreement at an early date." He said he hoped to be able to anounce such an agreement when parliament, which will recess tomorrow for the Whitsun holidays, reconvenes June 5.

The detailed formula already is being drafted and the belief was expressed in official circles it would be sent to Moscow by the end of the week.

Conscription Bill Passes

With one day to go before the Whitsun holiday recess, the House of Lords passed the government's conscription bill.

The house of commons already had approved it but the lords made several minor amendments which it will have to pass upon.

The measure, which makes men in their 20th year in England, Scotland and Wales liable to six months of compulsory military training, was expected to get final parliamentary approval tomorrow.

The government introduced a bill for creation of a ministry of supply with far-reaching powers over industries supplying war materials.

Russia Announces Huge Defense Budget

Moscow, May 25 (AP) — A Soviet Russian defense budget of 40,885,000,000 rubles (nominally $7,727,265,000) was announced tonight soon after the British ambassador had visited the foreign commissariat and reiterated that a full agreement soon would be reached for Russia's participation in an Anglo-French pact.

Sir William Seeds, the ambassador, visited Vladimir Potemkin, vice-commissar of foreign affairs, and soon after repeated Prime Minister Chamberlain's House of Commons statement of yesterday to the effect that London was making new proposals to overcome Soviet objections. He did not give an outline of the new proposals, however.

The new defense budget—representing an increase of more than 50 percent over the 27,000,000,000 ruble ($5,103,000,000) figure for 1938—was announced at a night session of the supreme Soviet amid cheers of the deputies.

"There is no power that the Soviet people, led by the communist party and the Great Stalin, cannot crush," declared Arseni Zvereff, finance commissar, who submitted the budget to the supreme Soviet—parliament—for approval.

Plans Strong Defense

The new budget indicated the determination of Joseph Stalin, the actual leader of Russia, to put the nation's whole resources behind strengthening the national defense.

The defense budget included anticipated expenditures for both army and navy and compared with anticipated expenditures of 154,957,000,000 rubles ($29,286,873,000) for all purposes.

The total estimated expenditures represented an increase of about 25 percent over 1938 and more than 60 percent over 1937.

The estimated income for 1939 was given as 155,670,000,000 rubles ($29,421,630,000), of which a business turnover tax is expected to bring in about 92,000,000,000 rubles ($17,388,000,000).

No Hope for Any of Crew On Squalus

apparently through an open induction valve.

All Died Quickly

"The lives of the men in the after compartment, in my opinion, were snuffed out immediately by the quantity of incoming water," Naquin said. "Of those that were left alive every man performed 100 per cent. There never was any panic."

One of the most vivid stories ever to come from the bottom of the sea, was told by Lloyd B. Maness, of Greensboro, N. C., a bulkhead guard, who had to leave a pal to die in order that other of his shipmates might be saved.

With almost superhuman strength, Maness shut the water-tight door that separated the control room from the rapidly flooding compartments.

"I had partially closed the door when several men shouted to me from the filling after battery room.

"'Keep it open,' they yelled, and I let the door slip back on its hinges to allow five shipmates to pass through."

It wasn't until that first impulsive action was over, that Maness realized Sherman Shirley, his chum, whose best man he was to be next Sunday at Shirley's marriage to a Dover, N. H., girl, had been left in the after section.

While high naval officers still expressed the belief tonight that an open induction valve caused the accident, they said they would not be certain until the ship was in drydock. Meanwhile, however, Machinist's mate Alfred G. Prien said warning lights indicated the valve was closed when the submarine dived. The consensus among naval and other observers here seemed to be that a mechanical breakdown was at fault, inasmuch as a valve certainly was open despite the evidence of the light signals.

Exact Cause a Mystery

"Lights flashed on to indicate the main induction valve was closed," Prien said. "I could not understand what happened."

Even as he told his story at the Portsmouth naval hospital, where all survivors were taken for observation, divers were probing the inlets of the submarine on its muddy resting place off the Isles of Shoals.

With an investigation already under way at the scene, a special inquiry board at Washington deferred its action until the vessel is raised. Simultaneously a Massachusetts representative sought a congressional probe into the sinking.

On the salvage scene—15 miles off this port—a flat calm fortunately prevailed today, with only a light breeze coming out of the southwest. Naval observers kept an eye cocked on the weather, however, as a rough sea would mean a halt in diving operations.

Because of the air in the forward compartments, the bow of the Squalus was nearly afloat tonight, and it was the task of the salvage workers to pump enough air into th after compartments to free the stern from the mud, allowing it to be towed.

Predicts Rapid Salvage

One high official said that if the weather remained good the salvage job would not be a long one. Weather observers gave the salvage operators some cheer with a report that only possible light rains tomorrow could slow their work.

In announcing that the salvage work would be pushed "around the clock," Captain Amsden added:

"If the divers are not actually down all or most of the time it will be only because they will be waiting for equipment or working on some surface job that needs immediate attention."

As the rescue bell was plunged down to be attached to one of the aft hatches of the chippied Squalus, the navy tug Sagamore crept up on the horizon, towing nine huge pontoons from New York. She halted at the Brooklyn's side for orders. The pontoons, salvage officers said, would be used only as a last resort.

Much of the day was spent in repairing the nine-ton rescue chamber, which yesterday and last night brought the 33 survivors to the surface in groups of seven eight and nine.

It was a history-making rescue performance, with the big bell in use for the first time under emergency conditions.

Three times the chamber was lowered into the ocean to lift men from the darkness and the cold of the Squalus to the free air above.

On the fourth and last ascent, a guiding line fouled, damaging the chamber in a minor, unrevealed manner. For nearly four hours the big bell, with its cargo of eight of the submersible's crew and a diver who was directing its movements, hung 150 feet beneath the surface.

Joke With Rescuers

The trapped men laughed and joked with the Falcon's crew by telephone, and at 12:30 a. m. (EDT) today the cable was untangled and one of the most astounding rescues in naval history was culminated.

Although only the slimmest of hope—virtually no hope at all—remained this morning that life still existed aboard the Squalus, Rear Admiral C. W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth navy yard and director of the rescue and salvage operations, announced that every possibility would be exhausted before hope was abandoned.

"We never say die until all hope is lost," the admiral said.

He explained the difficulties with the rescue bell on its last ascent and the anxious moments until it finally broke the surface.

"A diver was sent down to disconnect the downhaul," he said. "So if worst came to worst we could blow air into the bell for ascent by its own buoyancy. We only wished to do that as a last resort, as we were unable to tell how fast or where it would come up. It might rise under a rescue ship and bring up a lot of broken heads."

He told how a third diver became fouled in the line and was held under so long at an extreme depth that two hours were required to decompress him on the way up.

"We couldn't afford to let the bell up while he was down there," Cole said, "as the bell might have struck and killed him. Finally, we hauled him as far away from the bell as possible."

"I don't think I ever saw a pleasanter sight," he said, "than the bell reaching the surface. The survivors' smiles were even wider than ours."

Canadian Farmers Pay Tribute to Royal Visitors

Many in Overalls Greet King and Queen at Regine

BY FRANK H. KING

Regina, May 25 (AP)—Overalled farmfolk whose toil converted the old northwest territory into Canada's richest granary rubbed elbows with top-hatted dignitaries today in welcoming King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to this agriculture center.

The smiling sovereigns took the event in stride despite medical advice to slow down a little in their apparent desire to meet and talk to everybody in western Canada.

Intermittent showers, in one of the rare times they were not appreciated in this wheat-growing country, preceded the arrival of the train which brought them here from Winnipeg.

The train pulled into the flag-festooned depot to the din of blaring bands and the royal salute was fired as the king and queen emerged to be greeted by Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. A. P. M. McNab and Canada's minister of agriculture, J. G. Gardiner.

Get Great Ovation

The formal welcome was held almost in privacy as the station had been cleared before their arrival. There wasn't a cheer when they stepped from the train, hidden from public view, but a tremendous ovation greeted them when they stepped into the open from the station doorway.

From the railway station they drove to the city hall where Mayor A. C. Ellison welcomed them.

The royal procession moved from the city hall to the Saskatchewan legislative buildings where Premier W. J. Patterson and Mrs. Patterson were hosts at a reception at which legislators and their wives were formally presented.

Except for the greater number of horse-drawn vehicles lining the royal route, the scenes which greeted the king and queen were little different from those witnessed on their visits to other Canadian cities.

Many Farmers On Hand

Scores of farm families came by every means of conveyance to see their king and queen.

Tanned by sun and wind, many of the men came in their overalls, others in their Sunday best.

King George appeared none the worse from the crushed fingers he suffered in a door mishap on the royal train yesterday.

The nearest to a serious casualty aboard the royal train occurred when a chain supporting an upper berth snapped and dumped Frank Powell, Queen Elizabeth's English hairdresser, into a lower berth, occupied by Paul Tasse, 200-pound French-Canadian, the king's barber.

shut," said Maness, "and turned down the watertight screw."

That there must have been men trapped in the after compartments, Maness said, he "knew."

"But (and the usually carefree young face was very solemn) in an emergency of this kind, every bulkhead door in all sections of the ship must be fastened as a measure of safety. x x x I acted according to the requirements of my duty.

Realized Fate of Friends

"It was not until the first impulsive action was over that I began to feel the awfulness of the men's situation in the after section."

As the hours dragged, the dark ship became ever colder, and desperate signaling brought no response from the after-section. Maness lay still, conserving oxygen and thinking.

"Particularly I thought of Sherman Shirley, my chum. . . . and the wedding.

"I don't know whether I mentioned anything about my thoughts. But I do remember Commander Naquin ordering no mention of the men in the flooded section."

Defending his chief's curt order, Maness looked around at his interviewers and loyally explained:

"He realized that such talk would be demoralizing and that nothing could be done for them."

Hospital Guard Is Held for Strangling

Pittsburgh, May 25 (AP)—George Hummel, 37, guard at Mayview City hospital, was held today for the grand jury on the recommendation of a coroner's jury investigating the strangling of Lane W. Thomas, 25, husky negro and patient at the home. Hummel testified he subdued Thomas with a wet towel after the negro had attacked him. Three guards who aided Hummel were released.

Commander Tells Graphic Story of Squalus Sinking

Lieut. Naquin Praises His Crew for Conduct on Squalus

Portsmouth, N. H., May 25 (AP)—Faced with the same swift death that snuffed out the lives of 26 crew mates, 33 survivors of the sunken submarine Squalus—true to the traditions of the navy—remained calm until rescued from the dank chambers of the submersible.

This was the story told vividly in essence today by Lieutenant Oliver F. Naquin, commander of the Squalus, and other survivors of the stricken undersea craft.

Haggard and tired, Naquin, speaking from a hospital cot revealed for the first time that the men who were trapped in the vessel "met a swift and merciful death."

From the moment the craft began its swift descent until the survivors were rescued, he related, there was no sign of hysteria or disorder aboard the craft.

Praises His Crew

Naquin and others related how Lloyd Maness, an electrician's mate, saved the lives of all who escaped through shutting off—"by superhuman strength"—the door of a flooding compartment; how another alert electrician's mate, "sensing danger in a battery room," prevented an explosion by cutting off a hot switch; and how the entire crew endured cold so intense that it numbed them when they took their hands from under their bunk blankets.

A flat statement that he pulled the proper switch to close open induction valves, and that the signal lights flashing before him indicated the valve had been closed, also was given by Alfred G. Prien, machinist's mate, of San Francisco.

Telling his own story of the tragedy, Lt. Naquin said:

"The lives of the men in the after compartment, in my opinion, were snuffed out immediately by the quantity of incoming water. I knew at once, from the angle we took, that the after compartments were probably completely flooded."

Naquin explained that the vessel first took water after diving and leveling off at 50 feet.

Dropped to Bottom

"We blew all our ballast tanks at once," he said, "and the bow took an up angle of about 30 degrees, and then we dropped to the bottom and remained at an angle of about 11 degrees."

He said that after somebody mentioned the men in the after compartment, he "immediately let it be known that there was to be no further discussion of them. We rationed our Momsen lungs and sent up smoke signals."

Even the civilian observer aboard, Harold C. Preble, acted like a veteran, the commander said, and to prepare for any emergency he was given instructions in the use of the lung.

"There was no gas in the control room at any time," Naquin asserted, "except possibly the carbon dioxide we created by our own breathing."

"Maness, acting speedily and instinctively," he continued, "closed the watertight doors, shutting off the after compartment and keeping the water out of the control room. It was a job that required superhuman strength because of our up angle and the pressure of the water pouring into the after compartment."

Theodore Jacobs, of Staten Island, a signalman, credited Lawrence Gainor, of Honolulu, with preventing a devastating explosion aboard the sinking craft.

Prevented Explosion

"Gainor and I were in the forward battery room when the chief sensed some danger there," he said. "He went down and threw the big knife switch. The connectors on the battery were hot. When he pulled that switch he prevented an explosion."

An indication that Commander Naquin's thoughts were only for the welfare of his men came from Raymond E. O'Hara of Elmira, N. Y., a machinist's mate, who said the commander "gave one of the men his overcoat."

"He was the only man then who didn't have an overcoat," O'Hara said, "and believe me it was plenty cold down there."

entrance to the grotto near the Pau river as his caravan pulled slowly up before the infirmary. He was given a corner room nearest to the grotto, into which his "iron lung" was pushed gently up a sloping ramp.

Attendants said Snite would undergo general medical treatments before visiting the grotto.

Then he probably will be wheeled in the respirator to the "fountain of miracles" which Saint Bernadette is said to have started by scraping the grotto floor with her hands after she had been instructed by an apparition of the Virgin Mary.

Bergdoll Taken Into Custody on Board the Bremen

By JOHN FERRIS

New York, May 25, (AP)—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, World war draft dodger, returned voluntarily to the United States today to face the punishment he evaded 19 years ago when he escaped military custody and fled to Germany.

He was arrested on the North German Lloyd liner Bremen by military intelligence officers who had been told in advance that he was a passenger. Before the ship docked he was hustled aboard a customs cutter, taken to Governor's Island and locked up in disciplinary barracks.

It was on Governor's Island on March 4, 1920—nearly three years after the United States entered the war—that Bergdoll was convicted as a deserter, dishonorably discharged from the army and sentenced to five years in a military prison.

The immediate disposition of his case was not made clear by army officials. Secretary of Labor Perkins had instructed the immigration authorities to give the army precedence in the matter, even though a bill which would exclude Bergdoll from entry into the United States is still pending in Congress.

Bergdoll's wife, Berta, his son, Erwin, 5, and his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, were waiting at the pier with his lawyer, Harry Weinberger. When told of his arrest they left hurriedly in an attempt to see him at Governor's Island.

Bergdoll returned, he said in a minute-and-a-half interview in the children's play-room of the Bremen, because he was homesick, wanted to be with his wife who has announced her desire to become an American citizen, and because he wants his children to be Americans.

Southerner To Name Belle for Annapolis

Annapolis, May 25 (AP)—Unless a midshipman from the deep south crosses the Mason-Dixon line, a southern belle will be the envy of the nation's debutantes as color girl of the regiment of midshipmen during the gay June week ceremonies at the naval academy.

Southern belle stock jumped in June week speculation today when Midshipman Ben Jarvis, from out Freda way in Arkansas, won the right to name "the" girl to present the colors to his company at the formal parade Tuesday.

"Big Ben," star tackle on the 1938 football team, is midshipman commander of the first company, which won the inter-regimental drilling competition. The winning campany carries the colors in the parade.

Selection as color girl is traditionally the most coveted honor that can befall a girl during June week.

Jarvis did not immediately announce his choice. It may well be that Jarvis will go up into Yankee country to name his "OAO" (one and only, in middie dialect) as color girl.

But the odds favor a girl from the Cindy Lou and Scarlet O'Hara belt now that the selection is up to a southerner.

Fire in Coal Mine Burns Four Days

McAndrews, Ky., May 25 (AP)—An emergency crew began closing off a section of the Octavia J. Coal Company mine here which has been burning for four days.

Efforts to extinguish the blaze by pumping water into the mine prove fruitless.

Officials said they believed the fire was started by an arc from a trolley wire which was torn loose in a slate fall.

About 300 miners have been idle for four days.

Keyser Man Jailed For Drunk Driving After Motor Crash

Charges of drunken and reckless driving were placed against a Keyser, W. Va., man early this morning after the car he was driving crashed into another automobile at Baltimore and Mechanic streets.

The man, Robert E. Twigg, 24, was arrested by Officer James Condon and lodged in the city jail following a collision at 12:30 p. m. between his car and that of Leo Adams, 35, of 481 Eastern avenue, Cumberland. No charges were placed against Adams.

The Twigg car, headed south on Mechanic street, struck the Adams car as it proceeded west on Baltimore street. No one was injured.

Opposes Congressional Investigation of Squalus Disaster

Washington, May 25 (AP)—A proposal today for a House investigation of the sinking of the submarine Squalus encountered immediate opposition from Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval Committee.

Representative Flaherty (D-Mass) introduced a resolution authorizing the inquiry and a $5,000 appropriation, saying that it undoubtedly could supplement the navy department's investigation and might "develop something more quickly."

But Vinson, to whose committee the legislation was referred, announced that no action would be taken immediately.

R. E. Clapp, Jr. Named Assistant to Walsh

Baltimore, May 25 (AP) — Robert E. Clapp, Jr., member of the House of Delegates from Frederick county, was appointed an assistant attorney general today to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Charles T. Leviness.

Attorney General William C. Walsh who made the appointment said Clapp would take over his duties June 1.

Clapp, who has maintained a law practice at Frederick, said he would devote his entire time to the new post and was contemplating making his home in Baltimore.

Clapp was elected to the House in the last election. He is a graduate of Washington and Lee University and Harvard University. He was admitted to practice in Maryland in 1934.

President Signs Navy Appropriation Bill

Washington, May 25 (AP)—A $773,049,151 naval appropriation bill, largest in peacetime, received President Roosevelt's signature today, clearing the way for the navy to step up its expansion program to even greater speed.

Included in the appropriation, to be spent during the fiscal year beginning July 1, are funds for starting work on two 45,000-ton battleships—10,000 tons larger than the fleet's present dreadnaughts.

In addition, the measure provides money to start construction on a score of other vessels, to continue work on more than 100 already building, to purchase 500 airplanes and to run the navy during the year.

Wheeling Boy Is Drowning Victim

Wheeling, W. Va., May 25 (AP)—Thirteen-year old Harold Harvey drowned today while swimming in Wheeling creek—the first drowning victim of the season. Firemen recovered the body and worked futily for 40 minutes in an effort to revive the lad.

The youngster was among many who sought relief from the heat, which reached a high of 90 at the weather station Lock 12, one degree higher than any previously recorded this month.

Unofficially the temperature in the city ranged from three to four degrees more.

Dr. Higgenbottom Named Moderator By Presbyterians

Missionary Is First Layman Elected Since 1927

Cleveland, May 285 (AP)—A layman, Dr. Sam Higginbottom, 64, today was elected moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. and its 2,000,000 members.

Dr. Higginbottom, who makes his home nominally in Cleveland although he has spent most of the last 36 years as a missionary in India, was chosen by the church's annual assembly.

He received 496 votes; the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCarthy, Washington, D. C., pastor, 194 and the Rev. Dr. James A. Kelso, president of Pittsburgh's Theological Seminary, 184.

Dr. Higginbottom is the first lay moderator since Dr. Robert E. Speer of New York was elected in 1927. Dr. Higginbottom has been ordained only as an elder in India, where he heads the Allahabad Agricultural Institute. He is a native of Manchester, Eng., and friends said he had never remained in the United States long enough to become a citizen.

Joint Control for Rail And Water Carriers Voted

Washington, May 25, (AP)—By a lop-sided 70 to 6 vote, the Seate approved legislation late today that would place domestic water carriers under the same government controls now imposed on railroads.

The final rollcall gave little evidence of the four days of debate over the bulky 200-page transportation act, which now goes to the House. The dispute was climaxed with a strenuous but futile effort to free waterways from its terms.

Senator Bailey (D-NC), chairman of the commerce committee, protested that putting water carriers under the interstate commerce commission would foster "a monopoly" without "doing the railroads any good."

Mother Who Killed Son Refused Parole

Baltimore, May 25 (AP)—Parole Commissioner Herman Moser declined today to review a parole application filed by Mrs. Hattie Stone, convicted of second degree murder in 1929 for poisoning her 15-year-old son and collecting his $600 insurance policy.

Moser asserted Mrs. Stone's 18-year sentence was "light," and termed her "fortunate" she was not found guilty in the first degree.

Former Parole Commissioner W. David Tilghman, Jr., declined to parole the woman when her application was first filed in 1936. No evidence had been presented, Moser said, to justify a re-hearing.

Mrs. Stone was convicted in Harford county Circuit Court after an autopsy on the body of her son, George, showed traces of poison.

Midshipman To Get Numerous Medals

Annapolis, May 25 (AP) — Midshipman Louis Harry Roddis, Jr., of St. Paul, Minn., will look like a naval outfitting store when he collects his prizes for outstanding proficiency during June week.

Included in his trophies will be a pistol, a telescope, two sets of binoculars, two watches, a sword and a sextant.

Roddis today was announced as the honor man who led the class of 1939 in academic standing. He will receive nine prizes for excelling in various studies.

Midshipman Edward Latimer Beach, Jr., Palo Alto, Cal., was second in the honors standing and Marshal Dunford, Seattle, Wash., placed third.

Compromise Plan Seen Likely To Be Adopted Soon

Washington, May 25 (AP) — The much - denounced undistributed profits tax appeared doomed today as word was passed that a compromise plan for revising the revenue laws to encourage business recovery had been approved by Presiden Roosevelt, the treasury and congressional leaders.

The president made no announcement on the subject and Secretary of the Treasury Morganthau merely said that agreement had been reached on a plan that would "definitely" aid recovery. However, high congressional sources said the program called for elimination of the tax.

Leaders in the House and Senate predicted that the entire program, calling for several other changes, would be approved by Congress without much delay. There was, however, some dissent from that statement. Two members of the House Ways and Means Committee, in which tax legislation originates, said emphatically that they expected the House to produce its own revenue bill, regardless of agreements reached elsewhere. They declined to go into detail.

In the Senate, Minority Leader McNary (R-Ore) announced that he would call his Republican colleagues into caucus to determine what the party attitude should be; this would be done, he said, after a bill has been passed by the House, and concrete proposals can be laid before the caucus.

As the revenue law stands now, corporations with a net income of less than $25,000 are taxed at a rate ranging from 12½ to 16 percent, depending on the amount of income. Corporations whose income is more than $25,000 are taxed at 16½ percent if all profit is converted into dividends to stockholders. If a part of the profit is retained, the rate increases proportionately, reaching a maximum of 19 percent if no dividends are declared. This is the undistributed profits tax.

The first point of the compromise plan called for the elimination of this tax on Dec. 31, when it is scheduled to die automatically unless renewed.

In its place, a flat rate of 18 percent would be imposed on corporate income in excess of $25,000.

In addition, the plan contemplates:

Some changes in the present graduated scale of 12½ to 16 per cent on small corporations.

An arrangement to permit some corporations to escape payments otherwise due under the excess profits tax. They would be permitted to revalue their stock upward this year and perhaps annually hereafter in cases where the valuation is now too low. At present such revaluations can be made but once in three years.

A change in the law to permit corporations to spread losses over a three-year period, for taxation purposes, rather than confine them to one year.

See Boost of Payments By Social Security Board

Washington, May 25, (AP)—Experts of the social security board estimated today that pending proposals to revise the security system would increase benefit payments by $1,200,000,000 in the next five years and save employers and workers possibly $1,155,000,000 in taxes.

About $1,755,000,000 in benefits, they said, would be disbursed by the old age insurance system during 1940-1944 under the legislation proposed by the House ways and means committee. This would compare with about $555,000,000 which they estimated would be spent over the same period under the present law.

Britain Hopes To Speed Pact with Soviet Regime

Chamberlain Notifies Russia of His Good Intentions

London, May 25 (AP) — The British government notified Soviet Russia today of its readiness to speed negotiations designed to make her a member of the British-French front and prepared to send more detailed proposals for a mutual aid pact in a few days.

British officials expressed hope the proposals would be accepted by the Soviet government as the basis for a British-French-Russian declaration of mutual assistance until a formal pact could be concluded.

They did not disclose the details of the proposals but responsible quarters said they included:

1. A mutual assistance pact which would come into operation in the event of direct aggression upon the European territories of any one of the three signatories. (A conflict between Russia and Japan would be outside the scope of such a pact.)

2. Provision for consultation in the event of direct aggression upon territories of any state guaranteed by the three signatories.

3. Consultations among general staffs of the three powers to insure eficient collaboration if the signatories were called into action.

Chamberlain Confident

Which states would receive aid from the three powers has not yet been determined. This was one of the "details" to which Prime Minister Chamberlain referred yesterday as not yet cleared up. He expressed a belief, however, that no differences likely would arise.

Today's note advising Russia of Britain's position called attention to yesterday's action of the cabinet, which officials indicated approved the general terms of the new proposals, and Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement on the negotiations.

Chamberlain then announced the British government was making new proposals and he had every reason to hope it would be possible to "reach full agreement at an early date." He said he hoped to be able to anounce such an agreement when parliament, which will recess tomorrow for the Whitsun holidays, reconvenes June 5.

The detailed formula already is being drafted and the belief was expressed in official circles it would be sent to Moscow by the end of the week.

Conscription Bill Passes

With one day to go before the Whitsun holiday recess, the House of Lords passed the government's conscription bill.

The house of commons already had approved it but the lords made several minor amendments which it will have to pass upon.

The measure, which makes men in their 20th year in England, Scotland and Wales liable to six months of compulsory military training, was expected to get final parliamentary approval tomorrow.

The government introduced a bill for creation of a ministry of supply with far-reaching powers over industries supplying war materials.

Russia Announces Huge Defense Budget

Moscow, May 25 (AP) — A Soviet Russian defense budget of 40,885,000,000 rubles (nominally $7,727,265,000) was announced tonight soon after the British ambassador had visited the foreign commissariat and reiterated that a full agreement soon would be reached for Russia's participation in an Anglo-French pact.

Sir William Seeds, the ambassador, visited Vladimir Potemkin, vice-commissar of foreign affairs, and soon after repeated Prime Minister Chamberlain's House of Commons statement of yesterday to the effect that London was making new proposals to overcome Soviet objections. He did not give an outline of the new proposals, however.

The new defense budget—representing an increase of more than 50 percent over the 27,000,000,000 ruble ($5,103,000,000) figure for 1938—was announced at a night session of the supreme Soviet amid cheers of the deputies.

"There is no power that the Soviet people, led by the communist party and the Great Stalin, cannot crush," declared Arseni Zvereff, finance commissar, who submitted the budget to the supreme Soviet—parliament—for approval.

Plans Strong Defense

The new budget indicated the determination of Joseph Stalin, the actual leader of Russia, to put the nation's whole resources behind strengthening the national defense.

The defense budget included anticipated expenditures for both army and navy and compared with anticipated expenditures of 154,957,000,000 rubles ($29,286,873,000) for all purposes.

The total estimated expenditures represented an increase of about 25 percent over 1938 and more than 60 percent over 1937.

The estimated income for 1939 was given as 155,670,000,000 rubles ($29,421,630,000), of which a business turnover tax is expected to bring in about 92,000,000,000 rubles ($17,388,000,000).

News of the revised British formula for a British-French-Russian mutual assistance pact intensified interest in the opening sessions of the supreme Soviet.

No Hope for Any of Crew On Squalus

apparently through an open induction valve.

All Died Quickly

"The lives of the men in the after compartment, in my opinion, were snuffed out immediately by the quantity of incoming water," Naquin said. "Of those that were left alive every man performed 100 per cent. There never was any panic."

One of the most vivid stories ever to come from the bottom of the sea, was told by Lloyd B. Maness, of Greensboro, N. C., a bulkhead guard, who had to leave a pal to die in order that other of his shipmates might be saved.

With almost superhuman strength, Maness shut the water-tight door that separated the control room from the rapidly flooding compartments.

"I had partially closed the door when several men shouted to me from the filling after battery room. "'Keep it open,' they yelled, and I let the door slip back on its hinges to allow five shipmates to pass through."

It wasn't until that first impulsive action was over, that Maness realized Sherman Shirley, his chum, whose best man he was to be next Sunday at Shirley's marriage to a Dover, N. H., girl, had been left in the after section.

While high naval officers still expressed the belief tonight that an open induction valve caused the accident, they said they would not be certain until the ship was in drydock. Meanwhile, however, Machinist's mate Alfred G. Prien said warning lights indicated the valve was closed when the submarine dived. The consensus among naval and other observers here seemed to be that a mechanical breakdown was at fault, inasmuch as a valve certainly was open despite the evidence of the light signals.

Exact Cause a Mystery

"Lights flashed on to indicate the main induction valve was closed," Prien said. "I could not understand what happened."

Even as he told his story at the Portsmouth naval hospital, where all survivors were taken for observation, divers were probing the inlets of the submarine on its muddy resting place off the Isles of Shoals.

With an investigation already under way at the scene, a special inquiry board at Washington deferred its action until the vessel is raised. Simultaneously a Massachusetts representative sought a congressional probe into the sinking.

On the salvage scene—15 miles off this port—a flat calm fortunately prevailed today, with only a light breeze coming out of the southwest. Naval observers kept an eye cocked on the weather, however, as a rough sea would mean a halt in diving operations.

Because of the air in the forward compartments, the bow of the Squalus was nearly afloat tonight, and it was the task of the salvage workers to pump enough air into th after compartments to free the stern from the mud, allowing it to be towed.

Predicts Rapid Salvage

One high official said that if the weather remained good the salvage job would not be a long one. Weather observers gave the salvage operators some cheer with a report that only possible light rains tomorrow could slow their work.

In announcing that the salvage work would be pushed "around the clock," Captain Amsden added:

"If the divers are not actually down all or most of the time it will be only because they will be waiting for equipment or working on some surface job that needs immediate attention."

As the rescue bell was plunged down to be attached to one of the aft hatches of the chippied Squalus, the navy tug Sagamore crept up on the horizon, towing nine huge pontoons from New York. She halted at the Brooklyn's side for orders. The pontoons, salvage officers said, would be used only as a last resort.

Much of the day was spent in repairing the nine-ton rescue chamber, which yesterday and last night brought the 33 survivors to the surface in groups of seven eight and nine.

It was a history-making rescue performance, with the big bell in use for the first time under emergency conditions.

Three times the chamber was lowered into the ocean to lift men from the darkness and the cold of the Squalus to the free air above.

On the fourth and last ascent, a guiding line fouled, damaging the chamber in a minor, unrevealed manner. For nearly four hours the big bell, with its cargo of eight of the submersible's crew and a diver who was directing its movements, hung 150 feet beneath the surface.

Joke With Rescuers

The trapped men laughed and joked with the Falcon's crew by telephone, and at 12:30 a. m. (EDT) today the cable was untangled and one of the most astounding rescues in naval history was culminated.

Although only the slimmest of hope—virtually no hope at all—remained this morning that life still existed aboard the Squalus, Rear Admiral C. W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth navy yard and director of the rescue and salvage operations, announced that every possibility would be exhausted before hope was abandoned.

"We never say die until all hope is lost," the admiral said.

He explained the difficulties with the rescue bell on its last ascent and the anxious moments until it finally broke the surface.

"A diver was sent down to disconnect the downhaul," he said, "So if worst came to worst we could blow air into the bell for ascent by its own buoyancy. We only wished to do that as a last resort, as we were unable to tell how fast or where it would come up. It might rise under a rescue ship and bring up a lot of broken heads."

He told how a third diver became fouled in the line and was held under so long at an extreme depth that two hours were required to decompress him on the way up.

"We couldn't afford to let the bell up while he was down there," Cole said, "as the bell might have struck and killed him. Finally, we hauled him as far away from the bell as possible."

"I don't think I ever saw a pleasanter sight," he said, "than the bell reaching the surface. The survivors' smiles were even wider than ours."

Canadian Farmers Pay Tribute to Royal Visitors

Many in Overalls Greet King and Queen at Regine

BY FRANK H. KING

Regina, May 25 (AP)—Overalled farmfolk whose toil converted the old northwest territory into Canada's richest granary rubbed elbows with top-hatted dignitaries today in welcoming King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to this agriculture center.

The smiling sovereigns took the event in stride despite medical advice to slow down a little in their apparent desire to meet and talk to everybody in western Canada.

Intermittent showers, in one of the rare times they were not appreciated in this wheat-growing country, preceded the arrival of the train which brought them here from Winnipeg.

The train pulled into the flag-festooned depot to the din of blaring bands and the royal salute was fired as the king and queen emerged to be greeted by Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. A. P. M. McNab and Canada's minister of agriculture, J. G. Gardiner.

Get Great Ovation

The formal welcome was held almost in privacy as the station had been cleared before their arrival. There wasn't a cheer when they stepped from the train, hidden from public view, but a tremendous ovation greeted them when they stepped into the open from the station doorway.

From the railway station they drove to the city hall where Mayor A. C. Ellison welcomed them.

The royal procession moved from the city hall to the Saskatchewan legislative buildings where Premier W. J. Patterson and Mrs. Patterson were hosts at a reception at which legislators and their wives were formally presented.

Except for the greater number of horse-drawn vehicles lining the royal route, the scenes which greeted the king and queen were little different from those witnessed on their visits to other Canadian cities.

Many Farmers On Hand

Scores of farm families came by every means of conveyance to see their king and queen.

Tanned by sun and wind, many of the men came in their overalls, others in their Sunday best.

King George appeared none the worse from the crushed fingers he suffered in a door mishap on the royal train yesterday.

Hero of Submarine Tragedy Tells of Deaths of Friends

shut," said Maness, "and turned down the watertight screw."

That there must have been men trapped in the after compartments, Maness said, he "knew."

"But (and the usually carefree young face was very solemn) in an emergency of this kind, every bulkhead door in all sections of the ship must be fastened as a measure of safety. x x x I acted according to the requirements of my duty.

Realized Fate of Friends

"It was not until the first impulsive action was over that I began to feel the awfulness of the men's situation in the after section."

As the hours dragged, the dark ship became ever colder, and desperate signaling brought no response from the after-section. Maness lay still, conserving oxygen and thinking.

"Particularly I thought of Sherman Shirley, my chum. . . . and the wedding.

"I don't know whether I mentioned anything about my thoughts. But I do remember Commander Naquin ordering no mention of the men in the flooded section."

Defending his chief's curt order, Maness looked around at his interviewers and loyally explained:

Hospital Guard Is Held for Strangling

Pittsburgh, May 25 (AP)—George Hummel, 37, guard at Mayview City hospital, was held today for the grand jury on the recommendation of a coroner's jury investigating the strangling of Lane W. Thomas, 25, husky negro and patient at the home. Hummel testified he subdued Thomas with a wet towel after the negro had attacked him. Three guards who aided Hummel were released.

Young GOP Job

IF a person will just stop to think for a few moments about the bids of the New Deal to bring the youth of the country into the fold of radicalism, there can be little doubt of the vital need for an organization such as the Young Republican League has given to West Virginia.

For over six years now in this country a new theory of politics and government has had full sway. Their self-styled pseudonyms of 'Liberal' and 'New Deal' were designed to appeal to the youth of America. In every speech that Mr. Roosevelt has delivered he has made a direct appeal to youth to joint his party. He has baited them with CCC, NYA and all manner of alphabetical agencies on down to the Young Democratic Clubs of America.

In his Jackson day address, the president asked youth to forsake the faith of their fathers and more recently used a Young Democratic dinner as the vehicle to read the conservatives out of the party. His bid to youth has gone so far that he has filled the high places of his administration with school boys, has circumvented the seniority rights of the army to head it with young officers, and has placed a youngster on the supreme court.

It must be realized that this bait is tempting and lured by visions of easy jobs, fat pay and 'Soak the Rich' it takes a level head and a straight political thinker to resist.

The job that an ambitious Young Republican League in West Virginia has undertaken is to make every effort to enlighten the youth of the state, show them the fallacy of the New Deal and guide them back to the same, conservative principles of the Republican party. It is significant that the youth of West Virginia has recognized the Young Republican challenge to the New Deal and all that it stands for and every day are flocking to join their local Young GOP organizations.

The Young Republican headquarters in Charleston is daily swamped with letters inquiring for information on how to start a new Young Republican club or to reorganize their old one. The headquarters staff is kept busy mailing copies of the Young GOP constitution and platform to enthusiastic budding Republican leaders in the far reaches of the state and leaders of the Young Republican League have freely predicted that 1940 will find the greatest number of straight GOP ballots voted by those under 40 years old, ever before in history. Congratulating them upon their wor, the News hopes and predicts that their prediction will come true.

It Pays

AN INSURANCE COMPANY has completed an annual survey of employment opportunities among college and university graduates with the finding that more jobs await the graduates this June than were available for last year's seniors. More employers are represented on college campuses this year and more jobs are offered per employer.

Of 100 universities and colleges reporting in the survey, sixty-three find the number of employment calls definitely greater than a year ago; increases range from 10 per cent to 200 per cent. Only fourteen schools find employment demand lower this year, and the remaining twenty-three report about the same number of job calls for their graduates as in the spring of '38.

Based on current employment demand, fifty-seven of the colleges estimate that eighty per cent or more of their June seniors will be in positions before the end of 1939; a number see ample demand to furnish jobs for all their graduates who are seeking employment.

Technical and industrial concerns are active bidders for new personnel this year, with aviation showing the greatest expansion in demand. Accounting and sales promotion jobs are offered by a wide diversity of manufacturing, wholesale and retail concerns. Various phases of governmental work provide the bulk of the placement opportunities for several schools.

There is one obvious conclusion to be drawn from this survey. It is that, as unemployment conditions are not appreciably better than a year ago, the higher training is worth while in that it bespeaks opportunity even when that is generally thin.

Punitive Handicaps

IN his address to the little business men in Washington, President Roosevelt attempted to dismiss all criticism of the punitive tax policies of his administration by asserting that the tax on undistributed earnings yields only twenty million dollars a year, or less than two per cent of the total of corporate revenue, and by drawing from that fact the conclusion that it cannot be such a harmful tax.

But, as the Morgantown, W. Va., Post points out, the direct measure of the damage done by the tax on undistributed earnings is not to be found in the amount of the revenue it has yielded to the government.

"It is precisely because this tax is so heavy and discriminatory," says the Post, "that most corporations have distributed their earnings to stockholders rather than pay the punitive levy, and in that way have deprived themselves of the opportunity of plowing part of their earnings back into their business to increase employment and of the further opportunity to keep part of these earnings in reserve to cover operating expenses in periods of slack business.

"Repealing this tax would not deprive the government of any significant part of its present revenue, but would remove the penalty for business enterprise and prudence and initiative — and would undoubtedly encourage an expansion of business activity leading to more employment, larger payrolls, and better general business conditions."

Reduction of the undistributed earnings tax only to add the same portion of the burden on corporate payments amounts to about the same thing and carries the same deterrent. The logical and sensible thing to do in the light of distressing experience is to lighten the tax load on business and industrial operations, thus encouraging them to expand and thereby making them able to pay a greater volume of the tax on the lower rates.

Light in a Dark Place

THE PROBLEM of mental illness has been removed from the realm of superstition and for many years has been under the scrutiny of scientists. Some learned men insist that the affliction is inheritable, and one of the foremost of the nation's brain experts has told the American Medical Association convention in St. Louis that one in every thirteen persons in the United States is a potential parent of a mentally ill child. On the other hand, a group of New York psychiatrists takes an opposite view, having found, after an intensive study of hundreds if inmates of state asylums and of their brothers, sisters, and other relatives, that an analysis of the problem fails to show that the disease follows any pattern of inheritance like unto that for other physical characteristics.

Dr. Horatio M. Pollock and Dr. Benjamin Malzberg of the New York State department of health, who announce the results of their survey, did not set out to prove this idea. On the contrary, they went along with other delvers into the mysteries of the mind and began their work in an effort to prove the rule of "like father, like son." But they admit that they were converted by the facts; they were unable to establish the inheritance theory, and they found instead much evidence to cast doubt on the supposition that persons who have or have had mentally ill relatives are predisposed to the disease.

"According to the old rule," they concluded, "we should have found definite ratios, by the Mendelian law of heredity, but this requirement could not be met in our family data."

As Dr. Pollock suggests, it is a grave mistake to infer that the transmission of mental disease from generation to generation is a fatalistic process. He and his associates have satisfied themselves that this is an old-fashioned notion, and one that should be exposed as false.

Public Aids to Health

A SHIFT in interest from education to public health is indicated by a survey of the monetary assistance granted by 243 leading foundations during 1937, the latest year for which complete figures could be had. For medical research, medical education, the erection and support of hospitals and for other purposes related to medicine and public health, these foundations granted in the year named $13,495,898, or slightly more than one-third of their total disbursements.

Education, for many years the foremost concern of foundations, dropped to second place and received but one-fourth, or $9,170,318, of the total gifts. The other leading fields in which foundations subsidize projects are, in the order of their importance from the standpoint of grants: social welfare, $4,695,880; the physical and biological sciences, $2,253,289; government and public administration, $1,710,598; economics, $1,353,386.

Public health is unquestionably the outstanding concern of many groups. That fact is reflected in the many proposals for government participation in its promotion. Health of the individual, health of the community, health of the nation are among the things most to be desired. But the approach should be made with that surety which can come only with the test of experience.

The situation in Europe really boils down to this: Every nation really wants peace and is willing to fight any other nation which denies that.

Cost of living in Italy is mounting rapidly, we read. Hmm, we always have said that fellow Mussolini was no bargain.

Now we know why statues of war makers are usually of stone. It's cold and hard.

Example of man having the last word: "All right, then; take it."

Do Something Foolish

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Are you weary and fed up and discouraged?
Are you stuck in a rut, disguested with routine?
Has life gone colorless and tasteless?
Do you want to be happy again?

Marshall Maslin

(This sounds like an advertisement for something—that's exactly what it is!)

Then break your routine. Do something foolish, something you can't defend logically, something no sober-sensible person would think of doing. Some trivial thing, some bigger thing, something out of the ordinary.

If you've been eating at home too much, then Eat Out. Go somewhere and sit down and scan a menu and pick out a meal that wasn't cooked in your own kitchen. Linger over it and enjoy it.

Leave home for a night or a weekend. Stay at a hotel over night, if you can afford it. Take a trip into the country. Do something you've always wanted to do.

Buy something you can't quite afford. You'll be sorry, perhaps. But be like that hungry man who spent half of his money for hyacinths for his soul, and the rest for bread, for his stomach. Buy that something you thought you couldn't afford, and you will find it was just the something you needed. A picture. A chair. A book. A hat. A coat.

Remember when the family cow used to kick over the milk bucket and hike rebelliously for the barnyard? Remember when the sedate old horse that everybody trusted ran scandalously away down the home town's main street—and almost laughed at you afterwards? Remember how Rover used to go hunting for days and come back with a big grin on his face.

Every dog, every cat, every cow, every horse, every human being must do something eccentric, something "indefensible" once in a while and is the happier for it. We are not machines. We are living creatures. We may be domesticated but we are not quite tamed. There's a wicked gleam somewhere in the mildest eye. There's extravagance in the most miserly heart. There are laughter wrinkles in the sourest face. Sugar in lemons. Sap in the leafless tree. Life in the old dog yet.

If you would save your life, throw a bit of it joyfully away.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

We are coming up to the season of camping out, under the northern stars or in the frail shelter of a lean-to; the season that pulls at most of us when the trout begin to rise and the shy deer come down at early morning to nibble at lily pods and quench their thirst at the lovely, limped streams of Maine.

Edwin C. Hill

A lady, very much of the city, unfamiliar with the healing serenity of the woods, asks this writer:

"Is it safe to go such places? Aren't there bears and wildcats and all sorts of dangerous creatures?"

Yes, madam, plenty of creatures, but not at all dangerous if you let them alone. Minding one's business in the North woods is preety much like minding it anywhere else. And that's true not only in our American forest playgrounds but the world over. My friend Frank Buck, who photographs wild animals in their lairs and "brings 'em back alive", subscribes to a statement of members of the "Trader Horn" company, filming a screen story of wide popular acceptance in its day, that without fear they would walk across Africa unarmed, confident of freedom from molestation by wild animals of whatever breed and reputed ferocity.

Lions Like Cats

Americans by migratory tendency and wealth sufficient to indulge it, have, upon various occasions, advised this writer of the benevolent complacency of wild animals encountered when their safaris have paused for the night or encamped over a period of days. They tell of lions lying about like cats and cadging sweetmeats most humbly from the camp kitchens.

Indeed, the testimony of travelers in wild places whose interests were commercial or sightseeing or anything other than shooting or trapping, travelers who were mainly intent upon minding their own business, is quite unanimous in attributing to supposedly ferocious wild beasts a kindness, or, if you will, an indifference, to human beings, quite at variance with their reputed man-killing propensities.

A Strange Species

A very interesting and quite remarkable exception is found in the experience of British civil engineers engaged some years ago in building a railway in the Uganda area. In this case, authenicated facts are that some 200 natives employed as laborers were killed and carried away by lions. Now the Field Museum authorities were so interested in this extremely paradoxical incident as to send an expedition into Uganda to capture specimens of this deadly species and they are to be seen now in that famous institution on the banks of Lake Michigan.

A curious thing about them is that they all represent a strange species of lion. For one thing, the males have no manes and there is hardly anything about them to distinguish them from a lioness. Naturalists assign them to some curious subspecies and are at a loss to account for them. In their behalf it should be said that at the time the railroad was being put through Uganda there was a great scarcity of food both for animals and humans in that region.

Hunger Counts

Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of mammals and reptiles in New York's great zoological park in the Bronx, cites hunger as an incentive likely to mitigate a great cat's beneficent indifference to a man who will remain equally indifferent. Evidence offered by safari tourists in Africa is, he says, unquestionably credible; but it should be recalled that the lion country on that continent is filled with antelope, the lion's favorite food.

When animals can find an adequate food supply, Mr. Ditmars is inclined to accept all accounts of the immunity of human beings in faring among them. He, himself, traveling through regions of Central and South America, the habitat of the reputedly fiercest known member of the great cat tribe, the jaguar, was able to gather but a few instances of human lives destroyed by this animal, and these cases were spread over a period of years. Crossing Honduras, a guide told him he had never known of a human being killed by a jaguar.

In Costa Rica I have found that no one ever worries about jaguars, but credible evidence of attacks upon humans by bands of wild swine, which are small boars, existed in all parts of te country.

"Generally speaking," Mr. Ditmars said, "I am quite willing to agree that if you let wild animals alone—in other words mind your own business, above all if you do not annoy them by sneaking upon them with a camera—you will be quite safe in any beast habitat, except India, where tigers are. No matter what anyone says, I mistrust the striped cats."—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HAMILTON ON STAND

John D. M. Hamilton

Testifying before the Dies un-American activities committee in Washington, John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican national committee, denies emphatically that he had any knowledge of a "whispering campaign" in the south against President Roosevelt when he gave one of those accused of such actions a list of the members of the national committee.

OVERLOOKING SOME SPLENDID CAN DIDATES

Dionne Quins Are Cited As Disproving Theory That All Persons Are Equal

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, May 25—Consider these quints. They stand before kings. They are introduced as, "Five queens, the world's darlings." When received by the king and queen of England, the quints attract more eyes than the royal couple. Going to their meeting with royalty, the quints journey in state, in a private car. At home, they have at all times a retinue of nurses, doctors, attendants. They are rich. Only five years old and born in the most modest of circumstances, they have acquired property worth some half a million dollars. The world thrusts gifts at them, pays extravagant homage to them. By every standard, as the world looks at such matters, the quints are the five most fortunate persons on this continent.

Mark Sullivan

The quints are outside the scope of topics with which this column ordinarily deals. I allude to them only because I think there is in them a lesson useful for present-day America to learn. The lesson has to do with the field of social theory, politics, economics, the ideology of reform, the New Deal, democracy, communism—all that area about which the din of jargon daily beats upon our wearied ears.

Due to Birth

To get this lesson, consider these five little girls not as quints but as separate individuals. The sole reason for the eminence of the quints is that they are quints—they were born simultaneously. Had their births been spaced, had they been born one or two years apart, they would be just five little French-Canadian girls wearing the plainest of clothes, in a humble and commonplace home. Royalty would not send for them, nor even hear of them. The world would beat no path to their door. They would lead the most commonplace of lives and go to the most obscure of graves. There are, in the Dionne family, some older children, and a younger one. But they were born one at a time; they are out of the picture. I wonder how they feel about the whimsicality of nature.

Any one of the quints—if only one—would have been nothing. If you are born one, you are just average; if you are born one of five, you are superior.

Only a Little Girl

Or, had the sum of the five been born as just one child—which I suppose is what nature intended—that one child would have been just a little girl in a gingham frock. The eminence of the quints is due wholly to some faint mysterious accident in a woman's womb By that accident, these five children acquire a special privilege above all on earth. Thereby all other children become under-privileged.

To the New Deal, such over-privilege is intolerable. To the New Deal, only the under-privileged are society's concern. Getting yourself born more than one at a time makes for special privilege. It is a Tory trick; it makes you an economic royalist. It must stop.

I suppose there will be a law about it. Hereafter, by law, no quintuplets, no quadruplets, no triplets, no twins, under penalty of, etc., etc. Nothing but singles, absolutely. I suppose there will be a government body to regulate it, a new alphabetical agency, G. C. A.—Gestation Control Administration.

Inequality Is Fundamental

Reflect upon the whim of nature that elevated five little girls over all others on the earth. Reflect upon it and bear it in mind the next time you hear some demagogue yawp about equality. There is no such thing as equality, and nature did not mean there should be. This is a world that includes fundamental inequality between individuals—superiority of some, inferiority of others, in both cases dictated by nature. It is a world, too, that includes chance and luck, the elevation of some by blind accident, the lowering of others by accident equally blind.

Remember that. And when a demagogue tells you all persons are equal, know that he is lying to deceive you and advantage himself; or, often, that he is just a fool and believes his own words.

There is another word that just now the demagogues bleat even more frequently than "equality"—and just as falsely. They tell you they are going to give you security, social security, economic security, all sorts of security.

Security Against War?

They even say they are going to give you security against war. More grotesquely yet, they say they are going to make the burdens and risks of war rest upon each and all alike. The have two bils in Congress that are to "take the profit out of war". That is, they are going to take the chance out of war. War shall bear down on one man exactly the same as on another. War shall not do more detriment to one man than to another. Equality again!

I have a bill myself—I am going to ask some friend in Congress to introduce it. I think my bill will satisfy everybody—and that is a demagogue's dream. I have not yet put my bill fully into statutory language, but it will run something like this:

"Be it hereby enacted: That in any future war in which the United States shall engage, all male citizens shall be subject to draft.

"Provided, however, that no citizen shall be drafted, nor required to go to war, until after the government of the United States shall have duly and securely provided, that the bullets of the enemy shall be sprayed upon the armies of the United States with such absolutely even uniformity, that no one soldier shall run greater risk of being hit than any other soldier."

No Letter Needed

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

For unconscious humor, it would be hard to excel the president's letter to the Monopoly committee, asking that body to find out why the country's idle funds are not being invested. "Idle dollars profit no man," says Mr. Roosevelt. True. "We have an immense amount of wealth which needs to be created in this country," he goes on. Again true. "The problem is to use our added savings and increased credit to get this wealth moving." Still true! But the owners of idle funds in the United States are painfully awake of these truths. They have been shouting them from the housetops for the past six years.

No letter from the president was needed to acquaint anybody with this problem. And no study by the Monopoly committee is needed to expose the seat of the trouble. Idle funds are not being invested because the risks of productive enterprise are too great, the chances of making a profit too small. If by chance, a profit is made, the government siphons off a huge percentage of it in multiple and punitive taxes. The New Deal army of reformers and radicals had badgered business to the point where most investors feel there is no sense in playing a game which they are altogether likely to lose and in which they will be treated as public enemies if they happen to win.

Business has been bound, hog-tied, gagged and thrown under a crushing pile of debts and taxes. In the circumtsances, to ask why business does not get up and move along is adding insult to injury.

Marihuana Weed Use Is Alarming

By Eva M. Tarboy in the Lewisburg, Pa., Saturday Ne

The use of marihuana is becoming so alarmingly wide spread throughout the country that legislators are beginning to think seriously about laws preventing growth, sale and use. What is marihuana? Why is it a menace? Perhaps the following will enlighten you somewhat as to the nature of the weed and its destructive use.

Marihuana is known in India as Indian hemp or hashish. It is identified by botanical authorities as cannabis saliva. The Orient has applied the name cannabis americano. Recent years have brought into usage the name marihuana, a slang word of Mexican Indian origin.

It is an herbaceous annual, matures rapidly within 3 months from time of sowing the seed, varies in height from 14 to 16 feet, with a fibrous stalk, the not very prominent flowers giving off a characteristci odor. The fruit is hempseed from which oil is extracted. The amber colored resin encases the top with a glutinous substance like varnish. The resin is thought to be the chemical which taken internally or inhaled provikes the dangerous narcotic intoxication both physical and mental.

Although its cultivation is governed by legislation, its complete eradication is almost impossible because of its great commercial value in certain sections of the country. Cultivation for industrial purposes still exists on some two thousand acres, mostly in Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky and Minnesota.

This plant has fouh commercial uses in the United States. The strong fibrous stalk is used in the manufacture of twines, ropes, hats and certain brands of paper. The seed (bean) contains several products—food for birds, a drying oil used in paints, soap and linoleum. The hempseed (refuse), after extraction of oils, is sold in the form of cakes foor feeding livestock and for fertilizer.

The pharmaceutical preparations obtained from the resinous portion of the plant, effects of which are very uncertain, make it one of the most dangerous drugs. Physicians find it entirely unreliable and prevent its employment in ordinary medicines because it cannot be prescribed with accuracy. The drug has a corroding effect on the body and mind, weakening the entire physical system, and often leads made of a single cigarette because even this small dose can cause intense intoxication, raving fits, criminal assaults, criminal maniacal acts and homicidal tendencies. Will power is destroyed and inhibitions and restrainits are released.

Is Secret Affair

The possession and use of this drug is by nature of its lawlessness a secret affair. To what extent the illicit trade has grown cannot be stated with accuracy. The best indications are the increased seizures made by State and Federal authorities, the awakening of public opinion to the menace and the numerous appeals to the government for help.

In spite of State and Government narcitic authorities, many tracts all over the country are cultivated for illicit purposes. This illegal practice (bootlegging) constitutes another source of supply for dealers and peddlers of marihuana. The efforts of many states by enactment of uniform narcotic laws need to be correlated by the Federal Government. In 1937 the "Marihuana Tax Act" was presented to Congress in April and enacted into law several months later. The Narcotic Bureau of the Department of Justice at Washington ,D. C. is calling for the cooperation of every citizen in fighting the marihuana evel. We are urged to familiarize ourselves with the plant. If you know where it grows or is being cultivated, or believe it is being used and sold illegally, report this to the police authorities. The Bureau of Narcotics will gladly test any plants and give proper guidance as to its destruction.

The time to stamp out marihuana is now, before it places an indelible stamp upon the youth who seem to be its chief victims. We must pledge ourselves to the task of prevention education. The abuse of marihuana can be stamped out through corrective, preventive, educational work.

Maryland Farm Musings

From the Extension Service of the University of Maryland

Dr. M. A. Jull, head of the University of Maryland poultry department, states there has been good demand for the 1939 Maryland Poultry Yearbook and that a number of libraries have requested copies for reference purposes. Increased interest has been shown because the publication takes up many problems dealing with the poultry industry. Additional copies may be had by writing the department of poultry at College Park.

Maryland winter wheat acreage remaining for harvest is estimated at 386,000 acres as compared with 471,000 acres harvested last year and the 10-year (1928-37) average of 447,000 acres. The indicated yield per acre of 19.5 bushels compares with 20 bushels last year and the ten year (1928-37) average of 18.8 bushels. The indicated production of 7,527,000 bushels is about twenty per cent smaller than last year's crop of 9,420,000 bushels and eleven percent below the ten year (1928-37) average of 8,419,000 bushels.

Young GOP Job

IF a person will just stop to think for a few moments about the bids of the New Deal to bring the youth of the country into the fold of radicalism, there can be little doubt of the vital need for an organization such as the Young Republican League has given to West Virginia.

For over six years now in this country a new theory of politics and government has had full sway. Their self-styled pseudonyms of 'Liberal' and 'New Deal' were designed to appeal to the youth of America. In every speech that Mr. Roosevelt has delivered he has made a direct appeal to youth to joint his party. He has baited them with CCC, NYA and all manner of alphabetical agencies on down to the Young Democratic Clubs of America.

In his Jackson day address, the president asked youth to forsake the faith of their fathers and more recently used a Young Democratic dinner as the vehicle to read the conservatives out of the party. His bid to youth has gone so far that he has filled the high places of his administration with school boys, has circumvented the seniority rights of the army to head it with young officers, and has placed a youngster on the supreme court.

It must be realized that this bait is tempting and lured by visions of easy jobs, fat pay and 'Soak the Rich' it takes a level head and a straight political thinker to resist.

The job that an ambitious Young Republican League in West Virginia has undertaken is to make every effort to enlighten the youth of the state, show them the fallacy of the New Deal and guide them back to the same, conservative principles of the Republican party. It is significant that the youth of West Virginia has recognized the Young Republican challenge to the New Deal and all that it stands for and every day are flocking to join their local Young GOP organizations.

The Young Republican headquarters in Charleston is daily swamped with letters inquiring for information on how to start a new Young Republican club or to reorganize their old one. The headquarters staff is kept busy mailing copies of the Young GOP constitution and platform to enthusiastic budding Republican leaders in the far reaches of the state and leaders of the Young Republican League have freely predicted that 1940 will find the greatest number of straight GOP ballots voted by those under 40 years old, ever before in history. Congratulating them upon their wor, the News hopes and predicts that their prediction will come true.

It Pays

AN INSURANCE COMPANY has completed an annual survey of employment opportunities among college and university graduates with the finding that more jobs await the graduates this June than were available for last year's seniors. More employers are represented on college campuses this year and more jobs are offered per employer.

Of 100 universities and colleges reporting in the survey, sixty-three find the number of employment calls definitely greater than a year ago; increases range from 10 per cent to 200 per cent. Only fourteen schools find employment demand lower this year, and the remaining twenty-three report about the same number of job calls for their graduates as in the spring of '38.

Based on current employment demand, fifty-seven of the colleges estimate that eighty per cent or more of their June seniors will be in positions before the end of 1939; a number see ample demand to furnish jobs for all their graduates who are seeking employment.

Technical and industrial concerns are active bidders for new personnel this year, with aviation showing the greatest expansion in demand. Accounting and sales promotion jobs are offered by a wide diversity of manufacturing, wholesale and retail concerns. Various phases of governmental work provide the bulk of the placement opportunities for several schools.

There is one obvious conclusion to be drawn from this survey. It is that, as unemployment conditions are not appreciably better than a year ago, the higher training is worth while in that it bespeaks opportunity even when that is generally thin.

Punitive Handicaps

IN his address to the little business men in Washington, President Roosevelt attempted to dismiss all criticism of the punitive tax policies of his administration by asserting that the tax on undistributed earnings yields only twenty million dollars a year, or less than two per cent of the total of corporate revenue, and by drawing from that fact the conclusion that it cannot be such a harmful tax.

But, as the Morgantown, W. Va., Post points out, the direct measure of the damage done by the tax on undistributed earnings is not to be found in the amount of the revenue it has yielded to the government.

"It is precisely because this tax is so heavy and discriminatory," says the Post, "that most corporations have distributed their earnings to stockholders rather than pay the punitive levy, and in that way have deprived themselves of the opportunity of plowing part of their earnings back into their business to increase employment and of the further opportunity to keep part of these earnings in reserve to cover operating expenses in periods of slack business.

"Repealing this tax would not deprive the government of any significant part of its present revenue, but would remove the penalty for business enterprise and prudence and initiative — and would undoubtedly encourage an expansion of business activity leading to more employment, larger payrolls, and better general business conditions."

Reduction of the undistributed earnings tax only to add the same portion of the burden on corporate payments amounts to about the same thing and carries the same deterrent. The logical and sensible thing to do in the light of distressing experience is to lighten the tax load on business and industrial operations, thus encouraging them to expand and thereby making them able to pay a greater volume of the tax on the lower rates.

THE PROBLEM of mental illness has been removed from the realm of superstition and for many years has been under the scrutiny of scientists. Some learned men insist that the affliction is inheritable, and one of the foremost of the nation's brain experts has told the American Medical Association convention in St. Louis that one in every thirteen persons in the United States is a potential parent of a mentally ill child. On the other hand, a group of New York psychiatrists takes an opposite view, having found, after an intensive study of hundreds if inmates of state asylums and of their brothers, sisters, and other relatives, that an analysis of the problem fails to show that the disease follows any pattern of inheritance like unto that for other physical characteristics.

Dr. Horatio M. Pollock and Dr. Benjamin Malzberg of the New York State department of health, who announce the results of their survey, did not set out to prove this idea. On the contrary, they went along with other delvers into the mysteries of the mind and began their work in an effort to prove the rule of "like father, like son." But they admit that they were converted by the facts; they were unable to establish the inheritance theory, and they found instead much evidence to cast doubt on the supposition that persons who have or have had mentally ill relatives are predisposed to the disease.

"According to the old rule," they concluded, "we should have found definite ratios, by the Mendelian law of heredity, but this requirement could not be met in our family data."

As Dr. Pollock suggests, it is a grave mistake to infer that the transmission of mental disease from generation to generation is a fatalistic process. He and his associates have satisfied themselves that this is an old-fashioned notion, and one that should be exposed as false.

Public Aids to Health

A SHIFT in interest from education to public health is indicated by a survey of the monetary assistance granted by 243 leading foundations during 1937, the latest year for which complete figures could be had. For medical research, medical education, the erection and support of hospitals and for other purposes related to medicine and public health, these foundations granted in the year named $13,495,898, or slightly more than one-third of their total disbursements.

Education, for many years the foremost concern of foundations, dropped to second place and received but one-fourth, or $9,170,318, of the total gifts. The other leading fields in which foundations subsidize projects are, in the order of their importance from the standpoint of grants: social welfare, $4,695,880; the physical and biological sciences, $2,253,289; government and public administration, $1,710,598; economics, $1,353,386.

Public health is unquestionably the outstanding concern of many groups. That fact is reflected in the many proposals for government participation in its promotion. Health of the individual, health of the community, health of the nation are among the things most to be desired. But the approach should be made with that surety which can come only with the test of experience.

The situation in Europe really boils down to this: Every nation really wants peace and is willing to fight any other nation which denies that.

Cost of living in Italy is mounting rapidly, we read. Hmm, we always have said that fellow Mussolini was no bargain.

Leave home for a night or a weekend. Stay at a hotel over night, if you can afford it. Take a trip into the country. Do something you've always wanted to do.

Buy something you can't quite afford. You'll be sorry, perhaps. But be like that hungry man who spent half of his money for hyacinths for his soul, and the rest for bread, for his stomach. Buy that something you thought you couldn't afford, and you will find it was just the something you needed. A picture. A chair. A book. A hat. A coat.

Remember when the family cow used to kick over the milk bucket and hike rebelliously for the barnyard? Remember when the sedate old horse that everybody trusted ran scandalously away down the home town's main street—and almost laughed at you afterwards? Remember how Rover used to go hunting for days and come back with a big grin on his face.

Every dog, every cat, every cow, every horse, every human being must do something eccentric, something "indefensible" once in a while and is the happier for it. We are not machines. We are living creatures. We may be domesticated but we are not quite tamed. There's a wicked gleam somewhere in the mildest eye. There's extravagance in the most miserly heart. There are laughter wrinkles in the sourest face. Sugar in lemons. Sap in the leafless tree. Life in the old dog yet.

If you would save your life, throw a bit of it joyfully away.

Edwin C. Hill

We are coming up to the season of camping out, under the northern stars or in the frail shelter of a lean-to; the season that pulls at most of us when the trout begin to rise and the shy deer come down at early morning to nibble at lily pods and quench their thirst at the lovely, limped streams of Maine.

A lady, very much of the city, unfamiliar with the healing serenity of the woods, asks this writer:

"Is it safe to go such places? Aren't there bears and wildcats and all sorts of dangerous creatures?"

Yes, madam, plenty of creatures, but not at all dangerous if you let them alone. Minding one's business in the North woods is preety much like minding it anywhere else. And that's true not only in our American forest playgrounds but the world over. My friend Frank Buck, who photographs wild animals in their lairs and "brings 'em back alive", subscribes to a statement of members of the "Trader Horn" company, filming a screen story of wide popular acceptance in its day, that without fear they would walk across Africa unarmed, confident of freedom from molestation by wild animals of whatever breed and reputed ferocity.

Lions Like Cats

Americans by migratory tendency and wealth sufficient to indulge it, have, upon various occasions, advised this writer of the benevolent complacency of wild animals encountered when their safaris have paused for the night or encamped over a period of days. They tell of lions lying about like cats and cadging sweetmeats most humbly from the camp kitchens.

Indeed, the testimony of travelers in wild places whose interests were commercial or sightseeing or anything other than shooting or trapping, travelers who were mainly intent upon minding their own business, is quite unanimous in attributing to supposedly ferocious wild beasts a kindness, or, if you will, an indifference, to human beings, quite at variance with their reputed man-killing propensities.

A Strange Species

A very interesting and quite remarkable exception is found in the experience of British civil engineers engaged some years ago in building a railway in the Uganda area. In this case, authenicated facts are that some 200 natives employed as laborers were killed and carried away by lions. Now the Field Museum authorities were so interested in this extremely paradoxical incident as to send an expedition into Uganda to capture specimens of this deadly species and they are to be seen now in that famous institution on the banks of Lake Michigan.

A curious thing about them is that they all represent a strange species of lion. For one thing, the males have no manes and there is hardly anything about them to distiinguish them from a lioness. Naturalists assign them to some curious subspecies and are at a loss to account for them. In their behalf it should be said that at the time the railroad was being put through Uganda there was a great scarcity of food both for animals and humans in that region.

Hunger Counts

Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of mammals and reptiles in New York's great zoological park in the Bronx, cites hunger as an incentive likely to mitigate a great cat's beneficent indifference to a man who will remain equally indifferent. Evidence offered by safari tourists in Africa is, he says, unquestionably credible; but it should be recalled that the lion country on that continent is filled with antelope, the lion's favorite food.

When animals can find an adequate food supply, Mr. Ditmars is inclined to accept all accounts of the immunity of human beings in faring among them. He, himself, traveling through regions of Central and South America, the habitat of the reputedly fiercest known member of the great cat tribe, the jaguar, was able to gather but a few instances of human lives destroyed by this animal, and these cases were spread over a period of years. Crossing Honduras, a guide told him he had never known of a human being killed by a jaguar.

In Costa Rica I have found that no one ever worries about jaguars, but credible evidence of attacks upon humans by bands of wild swine, which are small boars, existed in all parts of te country.

"Generally speaking," Mr. Ditmars said, "I am quite willing to agree that if you let wild animals alone—in other words mind your own business, above all if you do not annoy them by sneaking upon them with a camera—you will be quite safe in any beast habitat, except India, where tigers are. No matter what anyone says, I mistrust the striped cats."—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Testifying before the Dies un-American activities committee in Washington, John D. M. OVERLOOKING SOME SPLENDID CANDIDATES

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, May 25 — Consider these quints. They stand before kings. They are introduced as, "Five queens, the world's darlings." When received by the king and queen of England, the quints attract more eyes than the royal couple. Going to their meeting with royalty, the quints journey in state, in a private car. At home, they have at all times a retinue of nurses, doctors, attendants. They are rich. Only five years old and born in the most modest of circumstances, they have acquired property worth some half a million dollars. The world thrusts gifts at them, pays extravagant homage to them. By every standard, as the world looks at such matters, the quints are the five most fortunate persons on this continent.

Mark Sullivan

The quints are outside the scope of topics with which this column ordinarily deals. I allude to them only because I think there is in them a lesson useful for present-day America to learn. The lesson has to do with the field of social theory, politics, economics, the ideology of reform, the New Deal, democracy, communism — all that area about which the din of jargon daily beats upon our wearied ears.

Due to Birth

To get this lesson, consider these five little girls not as quints but as separate individuals. The sole reason for the eminence of the quints is that they are quints—they were born simultaneously. Had their births been spaced, had they been born one or two years apart, they would be just five little French-Canadian girls wearing the plainest of clothes, in a humble and commonplace home. Royalty would not send for them, nor even hear of them. The world would beat no path to their door. They would lead the most commonplace of lives and go to the most obscure of graves. There are, in the Dionne family, some older children, and a younger one. But they were born one at a time; they are out of the picture. I wonder how they feel about the whimsicality of nature.

Any one of the quints—if only one—would have been nothing. If you are born one, you are just average; if you are born one of five, you are superior.

Only a Little Girl

Or, had the sum of the five been born as just one child—which I suppose is what nature intended—that one child would have been just a little girl in a gingham frock. The eminence of the quints is due wholly to some faint mysterious accident in a woman's womb. By that accident, these five children acquire a special privilege above all on earth. Thereby all other children become under-privileged.

To the New Deal, such over-privilege is intolerable. To the New Deal, only the under-privileged are society's concern. Getting yourself born more than one at a time makes for special privilege. It is a Tory trick; it makes you an economic royalist. It must stop.

I suppose there will be a law about it. Hereafter, by law, no quintuplets, no quadruplets, no triplets, no twins, under penalty of, etc., etc. Nothing but singles, absolutely. I suppose there will be a government body to regulate it, a new alphabetical agency, G. C. A.—Gestation Control Administration.

Inequality Is Fundamental

Reflect upon the whim of nature that elevated five little girls over all others on the earth. Reflect upon it and bear it in mind the next time you hear some demagogue yawp about equality. There is no such thing as equality, and nature did not mean there should be. This is a world that includes fundamental inequality between individuals—superiority of some, inferiority of others, in both cases dictated by nature. It is a world, too, that includes chance and luck, the elevation of some by blind accident, the lowering of others by accident equally blind.

Remember that. And when a demagogue tells you all persons are equal, know that he is lying to deceive you and advantage himself; or, often, that he is just a fool and believes his own words.

There is another word that just now the demagogues bleat even more frequently than "equality"—and just as falsely. They tell you they are going to give you security, social security, economic security, all sorts of security.

Security Against War?

They even say they are going to give you security against war. More grotesquely yet, they say they are going to make the burdens and risks of war rest upon each and all alike. The have two bils in Congress that are to "take the profit out of war". That is, they are going to take the chance out of war. War shall bear down on one man exactly the same as on another. War shall not do more detriment to one man than to another. Equality again!

I have a bill myself—I am going to ask some friend in Congress to introduce it. I think my bill will satisfy everybody—and that is a demagogue's dream. I have not yet put my bill fully into statutory language, but it will run something like this:

"Be it hereby enacted: That in any future war in which the United States shall engage, all male citizens shall be subject to draft.

"Provided, however, that no citizen shall be drafted, nor required to go to war, until after the government of the United States shall have duly and securely provided, that the bullets of the enemy shall be sprayed upon the armies of the United States with such absolutely even uniformity, that no one soldier shall run greater risk of being hit than any other soldier."

No Letter Needed

For unconscious humor, it would be hard to excel the president's letter to the Monopoly committee, asking that body to find out why the country's idle funds are not being invested. "Idle dollars profit no man," says Mr. Roosevelt. True. "We have an immense amount of wealth which needs to be created in this country," he goes on. Again true. "The problem is to use our added savings and increased credit to get this wealth moving." Still true! But the owners of idle funds in the United States are painfully awake of these truths. They have been shouting them from the housetops for the past six years.

No letter from the president was needed to acquaint anybody with this problem. And no study by the Monopoly committee is needed to expose the seat of the trouble. Idle funds are not being invested because the risks of productive enterprise are too great, the chances of making a profit too small. If by chance, a profit is made, the government siphons off a huge percentage of it in multiple and punitive taxes. The New Deal army of reformers and radicals had badgered business to the point where most investors feel there is no sense in playing a game which they are altogether likely to lose and in which they will be treated as public enemies if they happen to win.

Business has been bound, hog-tied, gagged and thrown under a crushing pile of debts and taxes. In the circumtsances, to ask why business does not get up and move along is adding insult to injury.

Marihuana Weed Use Is Alarming

By Eva M. Tarboy in the Lewisburg, Pa., Saturday Ne

The use of marihuana is becoming so alarmingly wide spread throughout the country that legislators are beginning to think seriously about laws preventing growth, sale and use. What is marihuana? Why is it a menace? Perhaps the following will enlighten you somewhat as to the nature of the weed and its destructive use.

Marihuana is known in India as Indian hemp or hashish. It is identified by botanical authority as cannabis saliva. The Orient has applied the name cannabis americano. Recent years have brought into usage the name marihuana, a slang word of Mexican Indian origin.

It is an herbaceous annual, matures rapidly within 3 months from time of sowing the seed, varies in height from 14 to 16 feet, with a fibrous stalk, the not very prominent flowers giving off a characteristci odor. The fruit is hempseed from which oil is extracted. The amber colored resin encases the top with a glutinous substance like varnish. The resin is thought to be the chemical which taken internally or inhaled provikes the dangerous narcotic intoxication both physical and mental.

Although its cultivation is governed by legislation, its complete eradication is almost impossible because of its great commercial value in certain sections of the country. Cultivation for industrial purposes still exists on some two thousand acres, mostly in Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky and Minnesota.

This plant has four commercial uses in the United States. The soft fibrous stalk is used in the manufacture of twines, ropes, hats and certain brands of paper. The seed (bean) contains several products, food for birds, a drying oil used in paints, soap and linoleum. The hempseed (refuse), after extraction of oils, is sold in the form of cakes foor feeding livestock and for fertilizer.

The pharmaceutical preparations obtained from the resinous portion of the plant, effects of which are very uncertain, make it one of the most dangerous drugs. Physicians find it entirely unreliable and prevent its employment in ordinary medicines because it cannot be prescribed with accuracy. The drug has a corroding effect on the body and mind, weakening the entire physical system, and often leads to made of a single cigarette because even this small dose can cause intense intoxication, raving fits, criminal assaults, criminal maniacal acts and homicidal tendencies. Will power is destroyed and inhibitions and restraints are released.

The possession and use of this drug is by nature of its lawlessness a secret affair. To what extent the illicit trade has grown cannot be stated with accuracy. The best indications are the increased seizures made by State and Federal authorities, the awakening of public opinion to the menace and the numerous appeals to the government for help.

In spite of State and Government narcitic authorities, many tracts are over the country are cultivated for illicit purposes. This illegal practice (bootlegging) constitutes another source of supply for dealers and peddlers of marihuana. The efforts of many states by enactment of uniform narcotic laws need to be correlated by the Federal Government. In 1937 the "Marihuana Tax Act" was presented to Congress in April and enacted into law several months later. The Narcotic Bureau of the Department of Justice at Washington ,D. C. is calling for the cooperation of every citizen in fighting the marihuana evel. We are urged to familiarize ourselves with the plant. If you know where it grows or is being cultivated, or believe it is being used and sold illegally, report this to the police authorities. The Bureau of Narcotics will gladly test any plants and give proper guidance as to its destruction.

The time to stamp out marihuana is now, before it places an indelible stamp upon the youth who seem to be its chief victims. We must pledge ourselves to the task of preventive education. The abuse of marihuana can be stamped out through corrective, preventive, educational work.

Maryland Farm Musings

From the Extension Service of the University of Maryland

Dr. M. A. Jull, head of the University of Maryland poultry department, states there has been good demand for the 1939 Maryland Poultry Yearbook and that a number of libraries have requested copies for reference purposes. Increased interest has been shown because the publication takes up many problems dealing with the poultry industry. Additional copies may be had by writing the department of poultry at College Park.

Maryland winter wheat acreage remaining for harvest is estimated at 386,000 acres as compared with 471,000 acres harvested last year and the 10-year (1928-37) average of 447,000 acres. The indicated yield per acre of 19.5 bushels compares with 20 bushels last year and the ten year (1928-37) average of 18.8 bushels. The indicated production of 7,527,000 bushels is about twenty per cent smaller than last year's crop of 9,420,000 bushels and eleven percent below the ten year (1928-37) average of 8,419,000 bushels.

Milk Producers Ready to Meet All Competition

Would Sell Milk for One and Half Cents a Gallon if Necessary

Washington, May 25. (AP) — The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, which handles the bulk of the capital's milk supply, has served notice that it is ready and able to meet any and all competition.

The association would go so far, if necessary, as to sell milk to distributors for one and one-half cents per gallon, B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer, told a house investigating committee.

Derrick made his statement under questioning by Representative Schulte (D-Ind), a member of the house district sub-committee investigating the capital's milk situation and charges that a monopoly exists here against producers from Western and Midwestern states.

Schulte had inferred, in his questioning, that the local association had in the past taken steps to block competition from independent non-member producers. Derrick denied the inference but said he believed that if a price war developed, the association could hold out as long as anyone else.

The hearing was enlivened by a clash between Schulte and Elwood Seal, District of Columbia Corporation counsel. Schulte had repeatedly asked Derrick if any local officials or employes had ever received favors from the association and Derrick consistently replied in the negative.

Seal interrupted and insisted that if Schulte knew of any such instances, he could disclose the facts. The corporation counsel said he was interested because of his official connection with the local government.

Schulte then asked if Seal had not requested appointment as counsel for the association, and Seal, replying that he had not, termed untrue local reports that Schulte had "forced me to resign."

Local newspapers recently reported Seal would resign his official position later this year and might become counsel for the milk association.

One Chin Is Enough!

Mustn't Let It Take Unto Itself a Mate

By HELEN FOLLETT

WATCH your chin. It may be planning to take unto itself a mate. If there is a slight bulge and a tiny cross line above it, you must get active. Also, as such a condition signifies increase in weight, you'd better stop raiding the icebox before you go to bed and close your eyes when you pass the candy shop.

The poor dear whose chin looks as if, in time, it will rest upon her chest feels that life has her beaten. If she had started to fight the horror when it first appeared she wouldn't be in a state of despair.

Treatment consists of the free use of ice and cold water to make tissues firm. Every night after the facial washing that new-come chin should be rolled away. App'y a heavy massage cream, pick up the flesh between thumb and first finger, apply gentle pressure. While the cream remains on skip over the skin surface with an ice cube. But don't let the cream remain on over night.

A little restraint when eating, if you please. Less butter and cream. You can have lean meats, vegetables that grow above ground, green salads, fruits. Drink buttermilk. It is non-fattening, good for a lot of troubles that have to do with digestive machines.

Some of the newest frocks from fashion headquarters show the Chinese influence. There's Peiping red and Betel red. We're mentioning them because you'll probably have to tear out and get new rouge and lipsticks if you wear these gorgeous colors.

Cathay blue is enchanting on the blonde beauty. You will find eye shadows of the same shade, if you are a good shopping hunter. Gobi beige is slick on the brunette and, believe it or be scornful, there are pinkish-beige tones in nail polish.

We trust that the outdoor girl will soft pedal make-up during the day, enjoy her fill of the new skin pigments when she fares forth to the evening party.

To keep hands in condition one requires a lotion and a massage cream.

As for the rosy finger-nails, you have to have a metal file, beveling files, orange wood sticks, needlepoint, curved scissors, cuticle cream, polish, polish remover, absorbent cotton. Ho hum!

Do you crouch at the dinner table, slumping your chest in and humping like a camel? The pose is not elegant, but a lot of girls assume it.

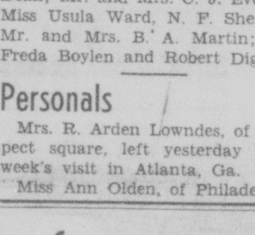
SEE THE LITTLE CARDS

YOU HAVE to watch your partner's play of the spot cards if you expect to do a worthwhile job on the defense. The play of a high spot, followed by a lower one, indicates a desire for the lead of that suit regardless of whether those cards were played as discards or in following suit. To disregard them is to decide that one player is better than two, at least in effect.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

At one table of a tournament South opened this deal with 1-Club. North was too smart-alecky to make his natural bid of 2-Clubs, preferring 2-Hearts because, as he said later, he thought the opponents might wish to bid hearts otherwise. After that South bid 2-No Trump, which passed around to East and there got doubled. North then took it out into 3-Clubs.

That last bid showed up North's crazy first call so completely that Mrs. Ralph C. (Sally) Young of Philadelphia, first ranking woman player of the country, led her heart 2 to the J and K. Then followed the club A, club K and the 7 to the 9, on which Mrs. Young discarded the diamond 6. The spade J was finessed, then the diamond 8 led to East's Q, Mrs. Young playing the 2 and completing her signal, which East did not see.

East, who should have led a diamond now, led the heart A and another heart, which was ruffed. The declarer thereupon laid down the diamond A, on which East could have saved the day by throwing the K, but instead played the 4 and then had to win the next diamond and lead into the combination tenace in spades, producing an overtrick.

Rain Predicted As Thermometer Soars in W. Va.

Farmers Cheered, But Weather Bureau Promises No Material Relief

Charleston, W. Va., May 25 (AP) — Faint signs of rain raised the hopes of West Virginia farmers today while the thermometer equalled season highs in many sections for the second straight day.

The U. S. weather observatory at Parkersburg predicted showers for tomorrow, but cautioned "no indication sufficient to afford material relief."

Ninety-degree temperatures were general throughout the southern and central portions of the state and there was no immediate indication that the thermometer would drop below the high 50's during the night.

Dry Weather 'Hurts'

Charleston had 92.5 degrees, a half-degree above yesterday's high. Fairmont had 90, as did Huntington.

At Huntington, W. D. Click, county farm agent, summed up the general situation throughout most of the lower Ohio river valley, saying:

"Each additional day of dry weather now really hurts."

In the Charleston area, Davis-Creek strawberries—one of the section's best known products—went on the market at 10 cents a quart, several cents under the usual price. The dry spell brought a crop which growers said was "not the quality we have had in the past."

Truck crops in the same district were about two weeks behind and a few products such as beets which have made an appearance were undersized.

Conditions Summarized

The weather bureau gave this summary of conditions:

Vegetation and farm work—about three weeks backward.

Wheat—below average generally, affected by dry weather.

Oats—prospects poor.

Meadows and pastures—fair to poor in all sections.

Potatoes—fair growth, need rain.

Fruits—apples fair to good all sections. Peaches killed off or few on trees. Small fruit good, some apples falling in central section.

tury-Fox picture, and its one of the most entertaining, action-packed romances this reviewer has seen in a long time of reviewing.

Back into old Arizona rides that gallant caballero, the Cisco Kid, the gayest gun-fighter of them all. Bullets can't touch him, jails can't hold him, posses can't find him and, with a thousand senoritas sighing for him, he can't have the one girl he really wants! The screen play by Milton Speerling is a merry, dashing affair and the excellent cast takes hilarious advantage of every situation. Lynn Bari, Cesar Romero, Henry Hull, Kane Richmond, C. Henry Gordon and Robert Barrat are featured in support of Baxter.

The Cisco Kid was first brought to the screen in "In Old Arizona" a decade ago. It was Warner Baxter's first big chance on the screen and he made the most of it. The performance won him the Academy Award.

Pedestrians of Future May Have to Wade

Denver (AP) —People don't walk any more so City Engineer A. K. Vickery has decided to quit building sidewalks.

In the future, when too many people don't object, Denver's improvement districts will be constructed with a "streamlined" curbing dividing the street and lot line. Instead of the conventional "drop side" curbing it will be a strip of concrete about two feet wide with a lower center.

The low center will collect water and permit it to flow as down a stream bed. In dry weather the narrow strip can be used as a sidewalk by the few people who still walk. Vickery says nobody walks in the rain anymore; they use a car or call a taxi during storms.

The new idea will spare taxpayers the expense of constructing sidewalks.

Japanese Warships Stop French Liner

Shanghai, May 25. (AP)—Japanese warships stopped and boarded a second European ship in 24 hours, halting the French liner Aramis 17 miles northeast of Hongkong late yesterday.

It was understood Japanese naval officers forced the French vessel to stop, sent men aboard and examined the ship's papers despite protests of the liner's officers. The Japanese were said to have left after detaining the Aramis for one hour. The Aramis was en route from Shanghai to Europe.

Japanese leaders gave further strong indications tonight of determination to lessen the hold of occidental powers on foreign settlements and concessions in China.

Friction on this issue was most dangerous at Shanghai and Kulangsu, international settlement at Amoy, South China, with Britain the chief opponent of the Japanese.

Chicks Swallow Tacks But 'Surgeon' Saves Them

Boz:eman, Mont. (AP)—When 17 of Mrs. Lawrence Moore's three weeks' old chicks showed signs of illness and one died she investigated and found a box of roofing tacks were missing.

Putting two and two together, she decided they added up to a case of mass indigestion and so she went to work with a razor blade, opening up the crops of the robin-sized chicks.

She took as many as seven tacks from one bird and all had at least one in his crop. The operations were a success; the chicks survived.

Proposes Special Week To Hit Book Borrowers

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 25 (AP)—The next "national week" proclaimed for observance in this country ought to be, in the opinion of Mrs. Minnie Belle G. Hope, "A Bring Back Borrowed Books Week." Mrs. Hope suggested that some books have been "borrowed" so long that their return would serve to "renew acquaintances that have lapsed for years."

Inventor Plans Airplane To Land Upside Down

Findlay, O. (AP)—Mike Murphy, manager of the Findlay airport and holder of the Freddie Lund trophy, is building an airplane which will land upside down.

That is, the pilot will be upside down when the plane lands. Or maybe the plane and the pilot both will be. The spectators won't be able to tell.

The plane will have two landing gears and two cockpits, one of each on the top and the bottom. Murphy is planning to take off and land upside down, but the first few times he tries it he'll have another pilot in the upper cockpit.

Murphy may take his stunt to the Cleveland air races this year—if it works.

Pedestrians of Future May Have to Wade

Denver (AP) —People don't walk any more so City Engineer A. K. Vickery has decided to quit building sidewalks.

In the future, when too many people don't object, Denver's improvement districts will be constructed with a "streamlined" curbing dividing the street and lot line. Instead of the conventional "drop side" curbing it will be a strip of concrete about two feet wide with a lower center.

The low center will collect water and permit it to flow as down a stream bed. In dry weather the narrow strip can be used as a sidewalk by the few people who still walk. Vickery says nobody walks in the rain anymore; they use a car or call a taxi during storms.

The new idea will spare taxpayers the expense of constructing sidewalks.

Japanese Warships Stop French Liner

Shanghai, May 25. (AP)—Japanese warships stopped and boarded a second European ship in 24 hours, halting the French liner Aramis 17 miles northeast of Hongkong late yesterday.

It was understood Japanese naval officers forced the French vessel to stop, sent men aboard and examined the ship's papers despite protests of the liner's officers. The Japanese were said to have left after detaining the Aramis for one hour. The Aramis was en route from Shanghai to Europe.

Japanese leaders gave further strong indications tonight of determination to lessen the hold of occidental powers on foreign settlements and concessions in China.

Friction on this issue was most dangerous at Shanghai and Kulangsu, international settlement at Amoy, South China, with Britain the chief opponent of the Japanese.

Dick Tracy—Ships That Pass—And Turn Around

White Orchids

By Marie Blizard

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY-THREE

KATE DOUGLAS drove her battered car out to Long Ridge one Friday afternoon in June. She brought it to a stop in the road beside a white picket fence that ran around the grounds of Twin Chimneys, the Parish cottage.

Her stout walking shoes crunched pleasantly on the gravel path that led to the front door. She bent and picked a pink flower to put in the lapel of her tailored silk suit.

The upper half of the Dutch door was open invitingly and she looked into the cool interior before calling out to announce her presence. Her eyes swept the view within, settling briefly on tennis rackets, a flower basket containing garden gloves and shears in the hall, on a bit of needlework and silver thimble on a rocker near the hearth.

She was thinking: Eleanor has done well with her life; better than I expected.

Absorbed in her reverie, she was not conscious of quick, light steps at her back.

Jessica threw her arms around her, hugged the thick frame to her own slimness.

"Gosh! Gee, Kate! How very grand to have you here!"

Kate beamed her pleasure.

"What a silly kind of hostess I am! Letting you stand here in the sun when you must be hot and thirsty. Come in and let me get you something nice and cool to drink. How about a beaker of buttermilk?"

"Just the thing, Jessica, but it's my eyes and not my tummie that have been starved. I've just been having a long look at the evidences of happy domestic life. Sit down here and tell me about it. Looks as if you were all having a pretty good time."

"We're awfully busy. All of us. And having a good time, too, in our own way."

There was something about the way she said the last half of her speech that made Kate ask, "How do you mean, Jessica?"

"This is sort of Liberty Hall," Jessica informed her. "We each do what we want to. We live like characters in a play."

"And are you . . . isn't there any family at home today?"

"Don't you start thinking of going back! We've got you here and it's here you're going to stay all week-end. You'll see the rest of them."

"What's this 'Liberty Hall' line?"

"Well, I'm an actress."

"That's one of the reasons I came up. I hear that you're doing a perfectly swell job. Aren't you having a lead this week?"

There was a suspicion of moisture in Jessica's eyes. She went over to Kate and sat on the arm of her chair. "And did you come up to see me play?"

"What else for? You've always been my favorite child and now, I'm sure, you'll be my favorite actress. What's this? A smile of appreciation salted with tears?"

Jessica brushed them away. "I'm sorry, Kate," she said with a grin, "only I'm sort of used to being treated as a very unimportant Parrish and I can't believe that anyone would come up just to see me. Excusit please!"

"Consider it excusited. Now tell me what you all do to have a good time." She avoided reminding Jessica of her former phrase. Obviously the girl realized she had said something she shouldn't have.

"Well, I work. I adore it! We rehearse all morning—incidentally, it's next week that I'm playing the lead—and we give a performance every night except Sunday and a Saturday matinee."

"All work and no play—"

"But there's lots of play, Kate, darling. Charles and I swim every day and play tennis and we go dancing after the show and have a glorious time. Don't you worry about my not having a good time. Everybody's having a good time. Even Sonny. He's in a perpetual seventh heaven because Mother doesn't have him watched every moment."

"Where is he, Jessica?"

"Down in a brook or up in a tree or whooping over hills. He's brown as an Indian and twice as noisy. He leads a real boy's life."

"And Phil?"

"Dad? Oh, he's very busy between his garden and golf and a putting green he is making out in the field. He'll be back shortly."

"How's your mother's golf?"

"She's given it up."

"Work?"

"No, she's quit work for the summer."

"Eleanor not working? I can't believe it! What does she do with her time?"

"Oh, she's frightfully busy. She has a beau, Kate. He keeps her busy. They toddle all over the countryside admiring nature, riding and doing very civilized things. He's one of those big outdoor men, darling, that would probably faint at the sight of a worm on a fishing line. But he's terribly in love with her and she's eating it up. It's her age, I suppose," she said with the tolerant smile of youth.

Kate was shocked, but she did not show it to the girl.

Eleanor came in before dinner, wearing a silk shirt and jodhpurs She wore a silk handkerchief knotted loosely over her hair. Her eyes sparkled and she looked younger than Kate had ever remembered her looking.

Late that night Kate sat on the side of her bed and they talked—about Kate's new job, about the country place Kate was going to buy, about the cost of living, about everything but the thing that was closest to Kate's mind.

She said: "Nell, who's this new admirer of yours?"

"I suppose you mean Dennis. His name is Dennis Pryor. He's visiting near here. He's very interesting.

"Jessica says he is madly in love with you."

Eleanor's guilt gave her away. She said angrily: "The child is talking too much. What does she know of love?"

Kate answered very gently. She had had a long talk with Jessica that afternoon. She said: "Eleanor, if I were her mother, I should try to find out what she knows of it."

Eleanor looked at her with a quick glance and decided that she would do so.

She waited until Kate had gone back to New York and she was alone with Jessica at breakfast.

She said: "Jessica, granted that you are growing up, there are some things about which you know nothing. You must not assume that you can analyze the emotions of people who are strangers to you."

"What are you getting at, Mother?"

"Let us say I'm thinking of love. I understand that you told Kate Dennis was madly in love with me."

"Isn't he?" she asked.

"Of course not! And if he were, what would you know of it? I think you are most impertinent."

Jessica got up and looked down at her mother. "Mother, don't be silly. Don't try to pretend with me, or about Dennis. You're not blind. I don't know why you are leading him on, but I know that you are. And I think it's cheap."

"Oh, you think it's cheap? Suppose you wait until you find out what love is before you talk too much."

Jessica's face was white and strained. She said rather strangely: "Mother—"

Eleanor said: "Ask Annie where the morning paper is. I've told her a dozen times that I want it on the breakfast table."

Jessica ran out of the breakfast room with a hand pressed to her mouth.

King George Says Canada and U. S. Can Avoid Force

Speaks at Winnipeg During Long Tour of Dominion of Canada

By FRANK H. KING

Winnipeg, May 25. (AP) — King George VI observed British empire day in this heart of the Canadian prairies yesterday with a world-wide radio address which extolled "the faith in reason and fair play" which he said was shared by Britain, the United States and his Dominion of Canada.

This joint faith, he said, was "one of the chief ideals that guides the British Empire in all its ways today."

"Canada and the United States have had to dispose of searching differences of aim and interest during the past hundred years; but never has one of these differences been resolved by force or by threat," the king said.

"No man, thank God, will ever again conceive of such arbitrament between the peoples of my empire and the people of the United States."

Gives 800-Word Address

The king paused in his tour of Canada with Queen Elizabeth to make the address, the longest he ever has broadcast. He gave the 800-word speech in a rich, resonant voice, slowly as always. His words were carried throughout the far-flung empire, across the principal radio networks of the United States, and to France and other countries.

The king and queen arrived in this metroplis of Manitoba, at 10:30 a. m. with the most precious of all gifts to the wheat-producing prairies — rain. And in return they received a warm western welcome on a chilly, sunless day.

American flags waved with British flags on some buildings and in many hands along the streets where it was estimated 50,000 visitors from below the international border braved bad weather to join the 250,000 people of Winnipeg in rousing street cheering for the royal couple.

Reception In Rain

Rain ran down the queen's neck as she stood under a dripping canopy for presentations. The king's right hand ached from being crushed in a door last night. But the queen never lost her smile nor the king his poise.

For the first time since the royal tour began the tops were up on the royal automobile when the couple arrived from Fort William to start the Winnipeg program. The royal couple looked at the skies, exchanged opinions and then held up the drive to the city hall until the top was lowered. High officials and newspapermen were all warm and dry in closed cars.

Leaving union station at 7 p. m., their majesties were scheduled to make a 20-minute stop at Brandon at 10:10 p. m., and then reach, Saskatchewan, at 12:30 p. m., M. S. T., tomorrow.

Gigantic Sturgeon Struck by Freighter

Chesapeake City, Md., May 25. (AP) —A huge sturgeon lost a decision today to the freighter Barbaigan of the Norwegian steamship line.

Entering the Chesapeake and Delaware canal, the freighter struck and crippled the sturgeon. Miss Katie Borger later discovered it in the yacht basin.

It was recovered by two fishermen who measured it at nine and a half feet and weighed it at 440 pounds. The sturgeon was killed, stripped of 88 pounds of roe and shipped to Baltimore.

A week ago Thomas St. Clair caught an eight-foot, 300-pound sturgeon in a pound net off Bull mountain on the Susquehanna river.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

New York State G. O. P. Reduces Lehman's Budget

Total of $24,000,000 Trimmed from Executive Budget

New York, May 25, (Special) —Republicans, in control this year of both houses of the New York legislature for the first time since 1932, are being acclaimed as pointing the way to the Federal government and other States in reducing expenditures and balancing the budget.

Taking the initiative in a drive for state economies which party leaders regard as a fitting prelude for National Debt Week, the Republicans succeeded in trimming a total of approximately $24,000,000 from the executive budget of Governor Lehman.

Not only were they able to effect this saving, but also to force adoption of their financial plan which will balance the budget for the 1940 fiscal year and show an estimated surplus of $616,608 against a deficit of $622,587 contemplated by the governor's budget.

The national significance of the action of the Republican-controlled legislature, which adjourned last Saturday, is being widely discussed in the inner councils of both major political parties and in the metropolitan press.

Republicans Successful

"The Republicans achieved what appears at the moment to be a considerable measure of success," commented the New York Times. "For the first time in years they took the initiative in finances, scrapped the governor's tax program and budget, and, if State revenues hold up, will be able to claim credit for budget balancing in the 1940 elections."

The New York Herald Tribune stated editorially:

"The great work on the budget will in retrospect assume, we believe, an importance greater than that of the immediate stringency which necessitated it, wider than the affairs of this State alone and more significant than is suggested by the actual sum—sizeable though that was — which was cut from the supposedly irreducible budget submitted by the governor.

"The governor's budget was irreducible by those methods of careful but conventional and comparatively painless cheeseparing which were all that he, like so many other executives in other governmental jurisdictions, had ever applied to it.

"And when they failed to balance it, the governor fell back, again like so many other executives, on the old, easy principle that the taxpayers would have to foot the bill, regardless of their present burdens, and the whole level of taxation would have to be jacked up to a permanent new plateau.

"The Legislature's firm rejection, under its Republican leadership, of that principle; its insistence that expenditure must be made to fit the resources of the taxpayer rather than that the taxpayer continue to be stretched upon the rack of an indefinitely expanding expenditure, and its ability to resort to unconventional methods of economy when the conventional ones confessed their inadequacy, struck a resounding new note in American public finance.

"It was a note neither of reaction nor of radicalism, but of plain fiscal sanity and common sense; and it was a note, we believe, which the people of this and of other States were waiting to hear."

An analysis of the State budget, made by Assemblyman Albert Low Moffat, Manhattan Republican who is chairman of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee and author of the Republican fiscal plan, shows net savings, compared with the governor's budget of $23,603,338. The governor's budget totalled $415,019,542, from which the Republicans chopped $30,507,510, leaving a legislative total budget of $384,513,032. The Republicans, however, passed special supplemental appropriation bills for various purposes totalling $6,904,172, which, while not included in the main budget are subtractable.

Among the new taxes imposed to balance the budget are a cigaret tax, estimated to yield $22,500,000; a liquor tax, estimated to yield $9,110,000, and taxes on Federal employees, estimated to yield $1,500,000.

Republican action was predicated upon the conviction that the public is turning away from the extravagant and wasteful spending policies of the New Deal.

Convicts Do Well In Correspondence Work

Norman, Okla., May 25 (AP)—Prisoners in McAlester, Okla., State Penitentiary apparently are thirsty for knowledge, Dick Moon, prison school instructor, reports. Recently when the University of Oklahoma offered free correspondence courses to the convicts a high percentage of them enrolled and 69 per cent of them are obtaining "A" grades. Only four per cent are in the lowest, or "F" class.

—Contrary to popular belief, the ostrich, when hiding, conceals his body, and leaves only his head exposed, so that he may watch the movements of his foe.

—Indians will restore buildings and sites of New Harmony's one-time communal settlement, famous in the 19th century as the scene of a "new order."

England's Voluntary Fliers Pay $65 to Learn

London (AP) —The cost to a pilot in the Civil Air Guard—a voluntary organization connected with home defense—from the time he joins to the time he obtains his pilot's "A" license is about $65.

The biggest item is for flying lessons, which work out at about $45, the remainder going for helmet, ear-phones, goggles, overalls, "Certificate of Competency," badge and examination fee.

New York State G. O. P. Reduces Lehman's Budget

Total of $24,000,000 Trimmed from Executive Budget

New York, May 25. (Special) —Republicans, in control this year of both houses of the New York legislature for the first time since 1932, are being acclaimed as pointing the way to the Federal government and other States in reducing expenditures and balancing the budget.

Taking the initiative in a drive for state economies which party leaders regard as a fitting prelude for National Debt Week, the Republicans succeeded in trimming a total of approximately $24,000,000 from the executive budget of Governor Lehman.

Not only were they able to effect this saving, but also to force adoption of their financial plan which will balance the budget for the 1940 fiscal year and show an estimated surplus of $616,608 against a deficit of $622,587 contemplated by the governor's budget.

The national significance of the action of the Republican-controlled legislature, which adjourned last Saturday, is being widely discussed in the inner councils of both major political parties and in the metropolitan press.

Republicans Successful

"The Republicans achieved what appears at the moment to be a considerable measure of success," commented the New York Times. "For the first time in years they took the initiative in finances, scrapped the governor's tax program and budget, and, if State revenues hold up, will be able to claim credit for budget balancing in the 1940 elections."

The New York Herald Tribune stated editorially:

"The great work on the budget will in retrospect assume, we believe, an importance greater than that of the immediate stringency which necessitated it, wider than the affairs of this State alone and more significant than is suggested by the actual sum—sizeable though that was — which was cut from the supposedly irreducible budget submitted by the governor.

"The governor's budget was irreducible by those methods of careful but conventional and comparatively painless cheeseparing which were all that he, like so many other executives in other governmental jurisdictions, had ever applied to it.

"And when they failed to balance it, the governor fell back, again like so many other executives, on the old, easy principle that the taxpayers would have to foot the bill, regardless of their present burdens, and the whole level of taxation would have to be jacked up to a permanent new plateau.

"The Legislature's firm rejection, under its Republican leadership, of that principle; its insistence that expenditure must be made to fit the resources of the taxpayer rather than that the taxpayer continue to be stretched upon the rack of an indefinitely expanding expenditure, and its ability to resort to unconventional methods of economy when the conventional ones confessed their inadequacy, struck a resounding new note in American public finance.

"It was a note neither of reaction nor of radicalism, but of plain fiscal sanity and common sense; and it was a note, we believe, which the people of this and of other States were waiting to hear."

An analysis of the State budget, made by Assemblyman Albert Low Moffat, Manhattan Republican who is chairman of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee and author of the Republican fiscal plan, shows net savings, compared with the governor's budget of $23,603,338. The governor's budget totalled $415,019,542, from which the Republicans chopped $30,507,510, leaving a legislative total budget of $384,513,032. The Republicans, however, passed special supplemental appropriation bills for various purposes totalling $6,904,172, which, while not included in the main budget are subtractable.

Among the new taxes imposed to balance the budget are a cigaret tax, estimated to yield $22,500,000; a liquor tax, estimated to yield $9,110,000, and taxes on Federal employees, estimated to yield $1,500,000.

Republican action was predicated upon the conviction that the public is turning away from the extravagant and wasteful spending policies of the New Deal.

Convicts Do Well In Correspondence Work

Norman, Okla., May 25 (AP)—Prisoners in McAlester, Okla., State Penitentiary apparently are thirsty for knowledge, Dick Moon, prison school instructor, reports. Recently when the University of Oklahoma offered free correspondence courses to the convicts a high percentage of them enrolled and 69 per cent of them are obtaining "A" grades. Only four per cent are in the lowest, or "F" class.

Gunter Holdup Men 'Guilty'

Face Prison Terms For Slaying Clerk

Two men who launched their crime career in Cumberland last March, yesterday wound up behind the eight ball at Greensburg, Pa., where a jury found them guilty of second degree murder.

The two men, Stanley Maruscewski and James Enos, both of Uniontown, started a 48-hour crime wave March 15 when they stole a car from Taylor's Parking lot on North Mechanic street, Cumberland.

From Cumberland they raced to Frostburg where they stuck up Gunter's filling station before continuing on to Uniontown. At Uniontown, they were joined by a compatriot, Robert J. Burd, who went to Scottdale with the pair the next day.

At Scottdale, the three men held up a service station and shot down the attendant while making their escape. According to officers, Burd was the trigger man.

Fast work by members of the Maryland and Pennsylvania State Police soon had the trio under lock and key. The trial of Maruscewski and Enos, both charged with first degree murder, ended yesterday at Greensburg.

When the jury brought in a verdict finding the pair guilty of second degree murder, the court reprimanded the jury members for not returning a first degree verdict. Burd will not be tried until the next term of court.

Prior to the trial, State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris had placed detainers against the two men in case they were acquitted of the murler charge. Yesterday's verdict means that the two men face sentences of from ten to twenty years in the penitentiary.

Choral Music on Lake To Feature Festival

A peace jubilee of choral music from a floating pavilion will feature the sixth Mountain Choir Festival at McComas Beach on Deep Creek Lake Sunday afternoon, July 2, it was announced yesterday.

The Tableland Choir and the Potomac Valley Chorus, both under the direction of the Rev. Felix G. Robinson, will unite with the Matin Choir, of Johnstown, Pa., directed by Harriett Weigle Nicely.

Bach chorals will be sung by a mixed quartet comprised of Mr. and Mrs. Ricar Speicher and Mr. and Mrs. Don Worley. A brass choir directed by the Rev. Harold Gamblin, of Mt. Lake Park, will play in the forest on the opposite side of the lake.

According to the schedule, Rabbi Morris Lazaron, of Baltimore, will make an address at the festival. In the event it rains, the festival will be held in the amphitheatre at Mountain Lake Park.

Student Chemist Honored

Howard Hoy Fawcett, a student at the University of Maryland, College Park, today had been elected master alchemist (president) of the Alpha Chi Sigma honorary professional fraternity. Fawcett, who is completing his junior year, joined the Maryland chapter last year, and has served as recorder since February. He is the nephew of Mrs. Beulah Hoy, of 3 Decatur street.

Named Delegates

Mrs. Helen Bujac, Mrs. Grace Bosenberg, Mrs. Sadie Smith, and Mrs. Rosalie Everstine will represent the Ladies Auxiliary of Henry Hart Post No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars, at the State Encampment at Hagerstown June 16, 17 and 18.

Mrs. Rowe Home Again After Playing Hostess At Nation-Wide Event

Mrs. Frank Stuart Rowe today had returned to her home at Grey Gables, Braddock Road, after playing a prominent part at the 21st Biennial of the National Federation of Music Clubs in Baltimore.

Mrs. Rowe was succeeded as president of the Maryland Federation of Music Clubs by Mrs. Roland Whitehurst. The retiring state president was reelected as president of the Capital district, which includes Washington, D. C., and four state federations.

Mrs. Rowe welcomed the Biennial delegates from all over the United States in her capacity as head of both the state and district federations prior to the Biennial. She was presented with a past president's gold pin during the convention.

Approximately fifteen from Cumberland attended part or all of the Biennial, the first ever to be held in Maryland. Mrs. Richard W. Trevaskis, of Cumberland, was reelected treasurer of the Maryland Federation.

Rust-Resistant Wheat for 1939

Regina, Sask. (AP)—Increased use of rust-resistant wheat is planned this year by farmers of Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Three varieties which in 1938 showed marked superiority in province-wide tests find special favor in Saskatchewan. They are Thatcher, Apex and Renown, wheats which stood up well in the areas most severely hit by rust.

In Manitoba, a new rust-resistant wheat called "Regent," in honor of the Royal visit to Canada, will be distributed.

Bob Feller Turns In One-Hit Shutout 11-0

Young Cleveland Southpaw Holds Red Sox In Check

Ken Keltner Hits Three Homers In Consecutive Trips To Plate

Boston, May 25 (AP)—Cleveland's Bob Feller turned in a one-hit 11-0 pitching triumph over the Boston Red Sox today. Only Bobby Doerr's clean single to right field in the second inning kept the youthful strikeout king from the no-hit hall of fame.

Ken Keltner, on consecutive trips to the plate, hit three home runs and Hal Trosky got another as the Indians clubbed Eldon Auker and Emerson Dickman for 15 hits. All the homers were off Dickman.

It was the second time in 13 months that a lonely blow desprived Feller of no-hit distiction. He struck out ten batters. Although he walked five, all the passes came with two out. It gave Feller his seventh win of the season.

No Boston played reached third base and only two made second. Feller passed Joe Vosmik and Jimmy Foxx in the third, while in the sixth successive errors by Keltner and Oscar Grimes put Dickman and Roger Cramer on the runways.

Cards Win Over Bees

St. Louis, May 25. (AP)—The league-leading St. Louis Cardinals, behind the effective hurling of Bob Weiland and Bob Bowman, won their seventh straight game today, defeating the Boston Bees, 7 to 1, to keep a jump ahead of the Cincinnati Reds.

Despite his sore arm, Weiland allowed but fifive hits in the 6 2-3 innings he pitched to get credit for the victory, and Bowman permitted but one blow the remainder of the game.

The Cardinals and the Reds, both four and a half games out in front in the National League race, will open a four-game series here tomorrow.

The Bees got the jump on the Cards, scoring first in the second inning. Al Simmons, first man up, was walked, and he scored on Rabbit Warstler's single after advancing on two outs.

In the fourth Stu Martin and Pepper Martin singled, and both raced home on Joe Medwick's one-base hit.

That was the scoring until the Cardinals' big seventh when they put across five runs.

Henry Armstrong Blasts Roderick Into Submission

Batters Heavier English Rival Around Ring For Fourteen Rounds

By DREW MIDDLETON

London, May 25 (AP) — Hammering Henry Armstrong blasted the British welterweight champion, Ernie Roderick, into helpless and bloody submission in fifteen rounds at Harringay Arena tonight.

The little Negro from Los Angles, fighting before a crowd of only 7,000, took no chances with his world welterweight crown. He took the agressive in the second round and for the next fourteen rounds batted Roderick, 10¾ pounds heavier, all around the ring.

Henry weighed 135 and Roderick 145⅜.

There were no knockouts, but Armstrong did everything else. He opened a cut under Roderick's left eye and raised a mouse the size of a walnut over Roderick's right peeper. Four times — in the sixth, ninth, eleventh and fifteenth — Roderick seemed on the verge of a kayo.

Courage Saves Roderick

Each time the Briton's courage saved him. Especially open to Hank's whistling right hook, he would take it, shake his head and stand open to take three or four more.

Henry, uncut on the face, but bleeding a little from an old wound inside his mouth, said after the fight:

"He was a fine, game boy. I'm sorry I couldn't put up a better fight, but both of my hands are sore and bruised."

Roderick had no defense. Hank would come swarming in, shooting his left to Roderick's Gibraltar-like chin and pounding his right to the body. By the time the 15 rounds were over and Ernie was breathless and blood-stained, there was a patch of red over his kidneys the size of a pie plate.

For about two minutes of the eleventh round Roderick came on. He started to lift left uppercuts to the little Negro's body and head and just for a moment Hank was stopped.

Promptly he switched and started to stay away, sending long lefts and rights to Roderick's head. They connected, Roderick pulled up his hands and started to jab back, and the fight was lost.

Phillies Break Seven Game Losing Streak By Whipping Cubs 8-7

Chicago, May 25 (AP) — Old Sylvester Johnson came to the rescue of the Philadelphia Phillies today, stopping a Chicago Cub rally one run short of a tie in the ninth and permitting the Phils to carry off an 8 to 7 triumph that snapped a seven game losing streak.

Johnson entered the game after two hits and a base on balls in the ninth forced Hugh Mulcahy to the showers. The Cubs pushed three runs across, but Johnson eventually struck out Hank Leiber with the tying run on base.

Until the last inning, Mulcahy, who was credited with the victory, had limited the Cubs to five hits.

Cumberland Loses Twi-Light Battle To Westvaco Nine

Only Handful of Fans Attend Poorly Contested Game at Park

Bi-State twi-light baseball made its initial appearance in Cumberland yesterday at Community Park, but with very unsatisfactory results, so far as Cumberland was concerned.

To begin with only a handful of fans attended, the game was poorly contested, the two teams committed 12 errors, and Cumberland lost to Westvaco, 10-7. The game was called by Umpire-in-Chief Miller in the last of the ninth with two out. Westvaco had pushed three markers across the platter in the first of the ninth but they were discounted, the scoring reverting back to the last full inning.

Radcliffe Experiments

Manager Radcliffe made several experiments yesterday but they didn't seem to prove successful.

First Tennis Match of Season At Dingle May 30

The first tennis match for the Dingle Tennis team will be played Decoration Day, starting in the morning on the Dingle Courts. Six single matches and three doubles.

This will not be a league match as the Frostburg, Keyser, Lonaconing, Luke and Cumberland league matches will not get under way for two weeks yet because the courts have not been available in some of the towns to date.

The Dingle courts have several new players this year from Pennsylvania and West Virginia, who are now located in Cumberland.

A tough schedule of teams from Pittsburgh, Baltimore and Washington, and other nearby towns has been arranged for the next three months, besides three regular tournaments.

Post's Beat Crowns 2-1; Runnerup in S.E. League

Bill Stevenson's single, scoring Doak from second in the fifth inning proved to be the winning marker as Post's beat Royal Crown 2 to 1 in their play-off game yesterday. Royal Crown scored in the first inning. Pannone singled and went to second when Widdows fumbled Sarver's grounder. Bartik then drove the ball to short field, scoring Pannone, while Sarver was forced at second.

Stevenson and Widdows each had two hits for Post's. Al Weltman let Royal Crown down with three hits.

The victory put Post in second place.

Yankees Get but Four Hits but Beat the Tigers 5 to 2

New York, May 25 (AP) — The New York Yankees made use of their specialty, one big inning, to down the Detroit Tigers 5 to 2 today although held to four hits by Archie McKain and Schoolboy Rowe.

It was the seventh victory without defeat this season for big Red Ruffing, Dean of the Yankee pitching corps, and his 200th in 15 years of American League service.

His mates obtained it for him by filling the bases in the seventh on two walks and an error and then cleaning them. Ruffing sacrificed one score across, Frank Crosetti singled another home and Rob Rolfe tripled for two more.

The Tigers touched Ruffing for eight hits and combined four of them—successive doubles by Charley Gehringer and Hank Greenberg, and singles by Roy Bell and Ralph Kress — for two runs to take the lead in the third inning.

Dodgers Break Losing Streak by Defeating Pittsburgh 8 to 2

Pittsburgh, May 25. (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers finally got in step today at the end of their disastrous western trip and walloped the Pittsburgh Pirates 8 to 2.

They won their road game at Chicago May 18, then proceeded to tie one and lose their next six in a row before today's triumph.

Tot Presnell held the Buccaneers to seven hits in registering his first victory of the spring. Pittsburgh bunched three singles for a run in the second and coupled two others with an error for their other run in the fourth.

Pressnell himself batted in two runs and Sington doubled in another in the second. Tuck Stainback singled behind Sington for a run in the fifth and hit two more homers in the ninth after three singles and an error had tallied two in the seventh.

Rampant Reds In Batting Mood Win Over Hubbell 6-1

But Giants' Defense Falls Apart As Reds Take Tenth in Row

Cincinnati, May 25. (AP)—The rampant Cincinnati Reds ran their string of victories to ten today with a 6 to 1 conquest of the New York Giants on the three-hit pitching of Lloyd (Whitey) Moore and Gene Thompson.

With Ernie Lombardi getting his seventh homer of the season in the fourth inning and driving in another run in the sixth on one of his two singles, Cincinnati's cause was never in doubt.

But the Giants' defense fell apart in the seventh and Carl Hubbell was sent to the showers with his second defeat in three starts. After filling the bases on three singles, the Reds scored two when Billy Jurges threw high at the plate and another on a fumble by Burgess Whitehead. Dick Coffman took over and Frank McCormick singled in the final run.

Moore lost a shutout and the Giants scored their first run in 20 innings when they were handed four passes in the eighth, forcing in their only score. Previously they had made two hits and they got one more in the ninth off Thompson.

Bob Feller Turns In One-Hit Shutout 11-0

Young Cleveland Southpaw Holds Red Sox In Check

Ken Keltner Hits Three Homers In Consecutive Trips To Plate

Boston, May 25 (AP)—Cleveland's Bob Feller turned in a one-hit 11-0 pitching triumph over the Boston Red Sox today. Only Bobby Doerr's clean single to right field in the second inning kept the youthful strikeout king from the no-hit hall of fame.

Ken Keltner, on consecutive trips to the plate, hit three home runs and Hal Trosky got another as the Indians clubbed Eldon Auker and Emerson Dickman for 15 hits. All the homers were off Dickman.

It was the second time in 13 months that a lonely blow desprived Feller of no-hit distiction. He struck out ten batters. Although he walked five, all the passes came with two out. It gave Feller his seventh win of the season.

No Boston played reached third base and only two made second. Feller passed Joe Vosmik and Jimmy Foxx in the third, while in the sixth successive errors by Keltner and Oscar Grimes put Dickman and Roger Cramer on the runways.

Cards Win Over Bees

St. Louis, May 25. (AP)—The league-leading St. Louis Cardinals, behind the effective hurling of Bob Weiland and Bob Bowman, won their seventh straight game today, defeating the Boston Bees, 7 to 1, to keep a jump ahead of the Cincinnati Reds.

Despite his sore arm, Weiland allowed but fifive hits in the 6 2-3 innings he pitched to get credit for the victory, and Bowman permitted but one blow the remainder of the game.

The Cardinals and the Reds, both four and a half games out in front in the National League race, will open a four-game series here tomorrow.

The Bees got the jump on the Cards, scoring first in the second inning. Al Simmons, first man up, was walked, and he scored on Rabbit Warstler's single after advancing on two outs.

In the fourth Stu Martin and Pepper Martin singled, and both raced home on Joe Medwick's one-base hit.

That was the scoring until the Cardinals' big seventh when they put across five runs.

Batters Heavier English Rival Around Ring For Fourteen Rounds

By DREW MIDDLETON

London, May 25 (AP) — Hammering Henry Armstrong blasted the British welterweight champion, Ernie Roderick, into helpless and bloody submission in fifteen rounds at Harringay Arena tonight.

The little Negro from Los Angles, fighting before a crowd of only 7,000, took no chances with his world welterweight crown. He took the agressive in the second round and for the next fourteen rounds batted Roderick, 10¾ pounds heavier, all around the ring.

Henry weighed 135 and Roderick 145¾.

There were no knockouts, but Armstrong did everything else. He opened a cut under Roderick's left eye and raised a mouse the size of a walnut over Roderick's right peeper. Four times — in the sixth, ninth, eleventh and fifteenth — Roderick seemed on the verge of a kayo.

Courage Saves Roderick

Each time the Briton's courage saved him. Especially open to Hank's whistling right hook, he would take it, shake his head and stand open to take three or four more.

Henry, uncut on the face, but bleeding a little from an old wound inside his mouth, said after the fight:

"He was a fine, game boy. I'm sorry I couldn't put up a better fight, but both of my hands are sore and bruised."

Roderick had no defense. Hank would come swarming in, shooting his left to Roderick's Gibraltar-like chin and pounding his right to the body. By the time the 15 rounds were over and Ernie was breathless and blood-stained, there was a patch of red over his kidneys the size of a pie plate.

For about two minutes of the eleventh round Roderick came on. He started to lift left uppercuts to the little Negro's body and head and just for a moment Hank was stopped.

Promptly he switched and started to stay away, sending long lefts and rights to Roderick's head. They connected, Roderick pulled up his hands and started to jab back, and the fight was lost.

Phillies Break Seven Game Losing Streak By Whipping Cubs 8-7

Chicago, May 25 (AP) — Old Sylvester Johnson came to the rescue of the Philadelphia Phillies today, stopping a Chicago Cub rally one run short of a tie in the ninth and permitting the Phils to carry off an 8 to 7 triumph that snapped a seven game losing streak.

Johnson entered the game after two hits and a base on balls in the ninth forced Hugh Mulcahy to the showers. The Cubs pushed three runs across, but Johnson eventually struck out Hank Leiber with the tying run on base.

Until the last inning, Mulcahy, who was credited with the victory, had limited the Cubs to five hits.

Cumberland Loses Twi-Light Battle To Westvaco Nine

Only Handful of Fans Attend Poorly Contested Game at Park

Bi-State twi-light baseball made its initial appearance in Cumberland yesterday at Community Park, but with very unsatisfactory results, so far as Cumberland was concerned.

To begin with only a handful of fans attended, the game was poorly contested, the two teams committed 12 errors, and Cumberland lost to Westvaco, 10-7. The game was called by Umpire-in-Chief Miller in the last of the ninth with two out. Westvaco had pushed three markers across the platter in the first of the ninth but they were discounted, the scoring reverting back to the last full inning.

Radcliffe Experiments

Manager Radcliffe made several experiments yesterday but they didn't seem to prove successful.

First Tennis Match of Season At Dingle May 30

The first tennis match for the Dingle Tennis team will be played Decoration Day, starting in the morning on the Dingle Courts. Six single matches and three doubles.

This will not be a league match as the Frostburg, Keyser, Lonaconing, Luke and Cumberland league matches will not get under way for two weeks yet because the courts have not been available in some of the towns to date.

The Dingle courts have several new players this year from Pennsylvania and West Virginia, who are now located in Cumberland.

A tough schedule of teams from Pittsburgh, Baltimore and Washington, and other nearby towns has been arranged for the next three months, besides three regular tournaments.

Post's Beat Crowns 2-1; Runnerup in S.E. League

Royal Crown scored in the first inning. Pannone singled and went to second when Widdows fumbled Sarver's grounder. Bartik then drove the ball to short field, scoring Pannone, while Sarver was forced at second.

Stevenson and Widdows each had two hits for Post's. Al Weltman let Royal Crown down with three hits.

Yankees Get but Four Hits but Beat the Tigers 5 to 2

New York, May 25 (AP) — The New York Yankees made use of their specialty, one big inning, to down the Detroit Tigers 5 to 2 today although held to four hits by Archie McKain and Schoolboy Rowe.

It was the seventh victory without defeat this season for big Red Ruffing, Dean of the Yankee pitching corps, and his 200th in 15 years of American League service.

His mates obtained it for him by filling the bases in the seventh on two walks and an error and then cleaning them. Ruffing sacrificed one score across, Frank Crosetti singled another home and Rob Rolfe tripled for two more.

The Tigers touched Ruffing for eight hits and combined four of them—successive doubles by Charley Gehringer and Hank Greenberg, and singles by Roy Bell and Ralph Kress — for two runs to take the lead in the third inning.

Dodgers Break Losing Streak by Defeating Pittsburgh 8 to 2

Pittsburgh, May 25. (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers finally got in step today at the end of their disastrous western trip and walloped the Pittsburgh Pirates 8 to 2.

They won their road game at Chicago May 18, then proceeded to tie one and lose their next six in a row before today's triumph.

Tot Presnell held the Buccaneers to seven hits in registering his first victory of the spring. Pittsburgh bunched three singles for a run in the second and coupled two others with an error for their other run in the fourth.

Pressnell himself batted in two runs and Sington doubled in another in the second. Tuck Stainback singled behind Sington for a run in the fifth and hit two more homers in the ninth after three singles and an error had tallied two in the seventh.

Rampant Reds In Batting Mood Win Over Hubbell 6-1

But Giants' Defense Falls Apart As Reds Take Tenth in Row

Cincinnati, May 25. (AP)—The rampant Cincinnati Reds ran their string of victories to ten today with a 6 to 1 conquest of the New York Giants on the three-hit pitching of Lloyd (Whitey) Moore and Gene Thompson.

With Ernie Lombardi getting his seventh homer of the season in the fourth inning and driving in another run in the sixth on one of his two singles, Cincinnati's cause was never in doubt.

But the Giants' defense fell apart in the seventh and Carl Hubbell was sent to the showers with his second defeat in three starts. After filling the bases on three singles, the Reds scored two when Billy Jurges threw high at the plate and another on a fumble by Burgess Whitehead. Dick Coffman took over and Frank McCormick singled in the final run.

Moore lost a shutout and the Giants scored their first run in 20 innings when they were handed four passes in the eighth, forcing in their only score. Previously they had made two hits and they got one more in the ninth off Thompson.

The Fort Hill Sentinels eked out a win over the Faculty nine yesterday by a 5 to 4 score.

The Faculty was composed of teachers and alumni. The schoolboys were behind until the third and fourth innings when they scored all their runs and later they staved off a last inning rally by the Faculty group.

McCoy and Orndorff of the Sentinels each had a single and double while Cavanaugh whaled out three hits to lead the attack for the Faculty. The losers stole four bases but couldn't convert them into runs as their hitting wasn't timely. Rice and Cook hit doubles to put the game on ice.

Two Americans In Quarter Final British Amateur

Dick Chapman and Bill Holt Triumph After Flirting With Defeat

Hoylake, Eng., May 25 (AP)—Dick Chapman, a slashing Connecticut Yankee, and Bill Holt, a broad-beamed fullback from Syracuse, squeaked into the quarter-finals of the British amateur golf championship today while English golf critics were writing them out of the tournament.

Playing in an elastic "corset," and followed by a doctor who kept massaging his injured shoulders, Chapman defeated the British Walker cupper, Gordon Peters, two up, in his second match today after being one down with three to play. Holt, a general big Viking, beat Nugent Head on the final green after one of the steadiest rounds of the tournament.

Chapman, who eliminated defending champion Charley Yates of Atlanta yesterday, canned a long putt on the 19th green to beat A. S. G. Thompson, English rugby star, in his fourth round match this morning, and, like Holt, he scored a 72, one under par, to win over Peters in the afternoon. Before taking on Head, Holt also was hard pressed to stop Jack Jones, finally winning on the 18th by ramming two perfect shots within 15 feet of the pin.

How They Line Up

Now there are two Americans, two Englishmen, two Welshmen, one Scotsman and an Irishman still in the quarter-final field. The Irishman is Jim Bruen, and "Bruen the Bear" is getting rougher all the time. The Englishmen are 17-year-old Ken Thom and Charlie Stowe, an old coal miner. The Welshman are A. A. Duncan, Welsh champion, and Sam Roberts, who formerly held the Welsh title. The Scot is Alex Kyle.

In the quarter-finals tomorrow, Holt plays Thom; Chapman takes on Duncan; Bruen meets Kyle, and Stowe faces Roberts.

The British couldn't have put the Americans out with a machine gun this afternoon. Head played the last eight holes on this course—and it's supposed to be the toughest finish in the world—in three under par, but Holt matched every shot.

Chapman was doing circus tricks, too. Peters, who is capable of beating anybody, simply outplayed the Connecticut Yankee for 15 holes. Every time Chapman tried to cut into Peters' lead, the Scot pulled down his canary sweater and holed one from around a corner. Chapman was exactly one over fours through fourteen holes—and he was still two down. And it was right there the people were shaking their heads and saying, "remember when." And it was right there that Chapman hitched up his corset and went to work.

Two Americans In Quarter Final British Amateur

Dick Chapman and Bill Holt Triumph After Flirting With Defeat

Hoylake, Eng., May 25 (AP)—Dick Chapman, a slashing Connecticut Yankee, and Bill Holt, a broad-beamed fullback from Syracuse, squeaked into the quarter-finals of the British amateur golf championship today while English golf critics were writing them out of the tournament.

Playing in an elastic "corset," and followed by a doctor who kept massaging his injured shoulders, Chapman defeated the British Walker cupper, Gordon Peters, two up, in his second match today after being one down with three to play. Holt, a general big Viking, beat Nugent Head on the final green after one of the steadiest rounds of the tournament.

Chapman, who eliminated defending champion Charley Yates of Atlanta yesterday, canned a long putt on the 19th green to beat A. S. G. Thompson, English rugby star, in his fourth round match this morning, and, like Holt, he scored a 72, one under par, to win over Peters in the afternoon. Before taking on Head, Holt also was hard pressed to stop Jack Jones, finally winning on the 18th by ramming two perfect shots within 15 feet of the pin.

How They Line Up

Now there are two Americans, two Englishmen, two Welshmen, one Scotsman and an Irishman still in the quarter-final field. The Irishman is Jim Bruen, and "Bruen the Bear" is getting rougher all the time. The Englishmen are 17-year-old Ken Thom and Charlie Stowe, an old coal miner. The Welshman are A. A. Duncan, Welsh champion, and Sam Roberts, who formerly held the Welsh title. The Scot is Alex Kyle.

In the quarter-finals tomorrow, Holt plays Thom; Chapman takes on Duncan; Bruen meets Kyle, and Stowe faces Roberts.

The British couldn't have put the Americans out with a machine gun this afternoon. Head played the last eight holes on this course—and it's supposed to be the toughest finish in the world—in three under par, but Holt matched every shot.

Chapman was doing circus tricks, too. Peters, who is capable of beating anybody, simply outplayed the Connecticut Yankee for 15 holes. Every time Chapman tried to cut into Peters' lead, the Scot pulled down his canary sweater and holed one from around a corner. Chapman was exactly one over fours through fourteen holes—and he was still two down. And it was right there the people were shaking their heads and saying, "remember when." And it was right there that Chapman hitched up his corset and went to work.

Royal Dot and Queen Teddy Run To Dead-Heat In First Race

Charles Town, W. Va., May 25 (AP)—Jockey Woodrow Kirk of Silver Springs, Md., rode three winners in the first four races today to furnish the only feature on a dull card.

Kirk was aboard H. B. Langdon's Ann Groucher, which paid $10, in the second, and booted L. E. Cowell's Green Water home at $10 in the third to become the first jockey to ride both ends of a daily double here. The double paid $34.20.

Celtic Legend took the featured sixth race for George Hoffan. She took command at the first turn and won driving from five opponents. She paid $8.80, $4.40, $2.80. Kai Min got up to take the place and Tuleyries Lin was third.

The first race, the Granville Purse for two-year-old maidens, saw a dead heat when C. H. Richard's Royal Dot came up with a rush to finish nose-nose with Mrs. Kenneth N. Gilpin's highly-regarded Queen Teddy. Royal Dot paid $10.60, Queen Teddy $5.20.

Anybody got a spare barrel? Way things are going I'll be lucky to get even that for this summer. Looks like that checker board suit will remain just a fair dream. Got to get back some of that cabbage that's gone down the chute the last four days. Shot at the moon yesterday and hit the top of Knobley mountain. Today I'm drawing a cross bow on Notice Me and Infidox at Suffolk Downs. Hope they don't cross me up!

Saddle Strap Sam's Posiscript to P.P.

Celanese Kelly had the "dots" on me when he said the last seen of me night before last was on the lam chasing "Detroit Bull." But what he didn't say was that, me being a hunch player and heading home, I probably would have named "Royal Dot" and "Celtic Legend" as my horses for yesterday. . . . That's more homelike with me.

However I see where "Elegant Lady," which Celanese picked yesterday is going today in an entry in the sixth at Charles Town and I'm giving the lady another chance. . . . They're priming to put over Ruth Lerner at the W. Va. oval and today in the fifth could be the day to get her home.

"Gay World" is going in the seventh at Suffolk and if it's a "top line" horse as advertised it could win this number at a price. . . . Then, too, this may be the day for that long delayed surprise by Panther Creek in the fifth there. . . . I just want to correct an impression made by Celanese that I'm going for the jumps at Fairgo . . . they got me on the jump already . . . and how!

P. S.—From following "Detroit Bull" I happen to hear he's a good bu—— horse to follow. SSS.

Rookie Wins For Nats

Washington, May 25. (AP)—The three-hit pitching of Rookie Alex Alexandra gave Washington a 4 to 1 victory over St. Louis today and both games of a two-game series.

Alexandra allowed only five Brownies to reach base. St. Louis scored its run in the fifth inning when John Berardino doubled to left, scoring Joe Glenn, who had walked, stolen second and advanced to third on Catcher Rick Ferrell's wild throw.

Anybody got a spare barrel? Way things are going I'll be lucky to get even that for this summer. Looks like that checker board suit will remain just a fair dream. Got to get back some of that cabbage that's gone down the chute the last four days. Shot at the moon yesterday and hit the top of Knobley mountain. Today I'm drawing a cross bow on Notice Me and Infidox at Suffolk Downs. Hope they don't cross me up!

Stretch,

Saddle Strap Sam's Posiscript to P.P.

Celanese Kelly had the "dots" on me when he said the last seen of me night before last was on the lam chasing "Detroit Bull." But what he didn't say was that, me being a hunch player and heading home, I probably would have named "Royal Dot" and "Celtic Legend" as my horses for yesterday. . . . That's more homelike with me.

However I see where "Elegant Lady," which Celanese picked yesterday is going today in an entry in the sixth at Charles Town and I'm giving the lady another chance. . . . They're priming to put over Ruth Lerner at the W. Va. oval and today in the fifth could be the day to get her home.

"Gay World" is going in the seventh at Suffolk and if it's a "top line" horse as advertised it could win this number at a price. . . . Then, too, this may be the day for that long delayed surprise by Panther Creek in the fifth there. . . . I just want to correct an impression made by Celanese that I'm going for the jumps at Fairgo . . . they got me on the jump already . . . and how!

SADDLE STRAP SAM

P. S.—From following "Detroit Bull" I happen to hear he's a good hu——— horse to follow. SSS.

Paul Muni, Bette Davis Head All-Star Cast in 'Juarez'

The Liberty Theatre will have as its feature attraction, starting tomorrow, Warner Bros.' magnificent new historical drama, "Juarez", starring Paul Muni and Bette Davis, and a supporting cast which truly deserves the much-abused term "all-star."

After two months of careful planning and selection, another month during which some seventy camera tests were made, director William Dieterle finally chose the forty-three players to support Paul Muni and Bette Davis.

It is for this reason that, on the cast sheet for "Juarez," are listed such famous names as Brian Aherne, John Garfield, Claude Rains, Gale Sondergaard Josepn Calleia, Donald Crisp, Gilbert Roland, Henry O'Neill, Louis Calhern, Montague Love, and Vladimir Sokoloff heading a cast of 1188 people.

Aherne, reversing matters with the star in that he wears a beard while Muni goes clean-shaven, portrays the ill-fated "golden" prince Maximilian von Habsburg, who wore the phantom crown of Mexico. Bette Davis is his Empress, the lovely and fragile Carlota. Rains plays Napoleon III, his consort is Miss Sondergaard as the Empress Eugenie. Film-goers readily will recall their work together in "Anthony Adverse" and this is the first time they have been reunited since.

John Garfield, John Miljan and Gilbert Roland are included in the list, Miljan and Garfield are generals on Jaurez's staff, one the shrewd Mariano Escobedo and Garfield as the fiery young Porfirio Diaz in later years to become the president of his country. A Jaurezian general also is Pedro de Cordoba as Riva Palacio and with him, on the staff, is Charles Middleton as Carbajal.

Donald Crisp, Louis Calhern, Irving Pichel and Monte Blue are other famous names in the cast. The veteran Montagu Love has an important supporting part, with other such roles going to Hugh Sothern, Harry Davenport, Alexander Leftwich, Gilbert Emory, Vladimir Sokoloff and Henry O'Neill.

"Arizona Legion" George O'Brien's Sixtieth Film

George O'Brein, formost outdoor star on the screen today, is currently portraying his sixtieth characterization, and his ninth for RKO Radio in "Arizona Legion," a fast-paced action-packed drama now at the Garden, which brings to life an almost forgotten chapter of early Arizona history.

Making his debut in "The Iron Horse" in 1924 O'Brien, during his fourteen years as a film actor, has appeared in both drama and comedy with equal sucess. Since 1928 he has appeared only in action films. In some such as "Ever Since Eve" and "Park Avenue Logger," comedy was interwoven with drama, but beginning with Harold Bell Wright's "When a Man's a Man" in 1935, O'Brien turned to the rough-riding, fast-shooting Westerns which have established him as the most popular outdoor star.

Although he has appeared in more than 250 motion pictures during his long career as an actor, suave Ricardo Cortez considers his present role in "Mr. Moto's Last Warning," playing at the Garden, more unique than any he has previously undertaken.

For in the sixth of the series of films starring Peter Lorre as the Oriental sleuth, Cortez plays the part of a ventriloquest!

"I don't claim to be an 'Edgar Bergen'," stated Cortez as he executed tricks with the dummy, Alf, "but I will say this: I never spent a more enjoyable two weeks than I have teaching myself to handle Alf. When I turn his head, wink his eye and 'make him talk' I feel quite proud of my self."

"Gun Packer" and "Blondy" At Embassy

The first qualification for going on location with a western troupe is, can you take it?

Many fantastic practical jokes have been pulled during the shooting of a western film, as Jack Randall, star of Monogram's "Gun Packer," now at the Embassy theatre, can testify.

The usual procedure is to "initiate" a new-comer into western ways by playing a joke on him. The victim of the "Gun Packer" troupe was Ray Turner, who plays Randall's colored side-kick in the film.

Ray had been warned on the way to Kernville that he must be careful not to make the cowboys mad, because they would just as soon shoot you as not.

Everything went along fine until Ray was to do a big scene with Charley King, the heavy. Charley and Jack Randall were together on this gag, and when Ray forgot his lines, King pretended to be enraged, and pulled out his gun, jamming against the poor colored boy's ribs. Randall, standing directly behind King, thought it was Charley's and that he was shot. He promptly fainted.

Production was then held up for half-an-hour while Ray recovered, and an irate director was looking for Randall and Charley King.

There were no hard feelings, however, and a lot of laughs.

"Gun Packer" is the story of a law officer who turns bad man to solve a two year old mystery.

The second feature, the comedy hit "Blondy," stars Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake and Larry Simms.

OPENS MONDAY AT THE MARYLAND THEATRE

PLAY LEADS IN "JUAREZ"

John Garfield, as General Diaz, confers with the president of the Mexican republic Benito Juarez (Paul Muni) in Warner Bros.' inspiring historical drama, "Juarez," coming to the Liberty tomorrow.

Plenty of Romance, Excitement In "The Return of the Cisco Kid"

"Only one army to catch the Cisco Kid? Amigos, it is to laugh!" So boasts Cisco, and it was to laugh indeed (uproariously in fact) when "The Return of the Cisco Kid" opens today at the Strand Theatre, Warner Baxter, starred as the character that made him famous, has re-created for the screen Gay Nineties, grand opera selections, and a dash of the day's hit tunes. In each case the songs are set against colorful backgrounds.

Lew Ayres, as Miss MacDonald's composer-pianist husband, gets his best role to date. He is ideally suited for the part and turns in an outstanding performance.

Ian Hunter forms an interesting third point to the romantic triangles and comedy is split three ways between thealways hilarious Frank Morgan, as a Broadway theatrical producer, and his two chorus-girl shadows, Virginia Grey and Rita Johnson who battle to the death for his affections.

Jeanette MacDonald in "Broadway Serenade"

Packed with musical, romantic and eye-filling thrills, "Broadway Serenade," starring Jenaette MacDonald, opened last night at the Maryland Theatre for an engagement of four days. Definitely one for the "must see" list, "Broadway Serenade" hasn't missed a trick in including all of the elements of top flight entertainment.

Unlike most films in the musical category, this one contains a story which holds interest from the first scene until the fadeout. In brief, it is the tale of a young married couple, she a singer, he a composer-pianist. As a team they play most of New York's cheap night clubs until a lucky break starts the girl climbing high on the ladder of musical-comedy success.

Seldom has Jeanette MacDonald had a better opportunity for both her dramatic and vocal abilities. For the first time since "San Francisco" she carries the vocal honors singly. Her songs have been wisely selected to please diversified audiences. There are favorites of the

Since 1928 he has appeared only in action films. In some such as "Ever Since Eve" and "Park Avenue Logger," comedy was interwoven with drama, but beginning with Harold Bell Wright's "When a Man's a Man" in 1935, O'Brien turned to the rough-riding, fast-shooting Westerns which have established him as the most popular outdoor star

Although he has appeared in more than 250 motion pictures during his long career as an actor, suave Ricardo Cortez considers his present role in "Mr. Moto's Last Warning," playing at the Garden, more unique than any he has previously undertaken.

For in the sixth of the series of films starring Peter Lorre as the Oriental sleuth, Cortez plays the part of a ventriloquest!

"I don't claim to be an 'Edgar Bergen'," stated Cortez as he executed tricks with the dummy, Alf, "but I will say this: I never spent a more enjoyable two weeks than I have teaching myself to handle Alf. When I turn his head, wink his eye and 'make him talk' I feel quite proud of my self."

"Gun Packer" and "Blondy" At Embassy

The first qualification for going on location with a western troupe is, can you take it?

Many fantastic practical jokes have been pulled during the shooting of a western film, as Jack Randall, star of Monogram's "Gun Packer," now at the Embassy theatre, can testify.

The usual procedure is to "initiate" a new-comer into western ways by playing a joke on him. The victim of the "Gun Packer" troupe was Ray Turner, who plays Randall's colored side-kick in the film.

Ray had been warned on the way to Kernville that he must be careful not to make the cowboys mad, because they would just as soon shoot you as not.

Everything went along fine until Ray was to do a big scene with Charley King, the heavy. Charley and Jack Randall were together on this gag, and when Ray forgot his lines, King pretended to be enraged, and pulled out his gun, jamming against the poor colored boy's ribs. Randall, standing directly behind King, thought it was Charley's and that he was shot. He promptly fainted.

Production was then held up for half-an-hour while Ray recovered, and an irate director was looking for Randall and Charley King.

There were no hard feelings, however, and a lot of laughs.

"Gun Packer" is the story of a law officer who turns bad man to solve a two year old mystery.

The second feature, the comedy hit "Blondy," stars Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake and Larry Simms.

Jeanette MacDonald in "Broadway Serenade"

Packed with musical, romantic and eye-filling thrills, "Broadway Serenade," starring Jenaette MacDonald, opened last night at the Maryland Theatre for an engagement of four days. Definitely one for the "must see" list, "Broadway Serenade" hasn't missed a trick in including all of the elements of top flight entertainment.

Unlike most films in the musical category, this one contains a story which holds interest from the first scene until the fadeout. In brief, it is the tale of a young married couple, she a singer, he a composer-pianist. As a team they play most of New York's cheap night clubs until a lucky break starts the girl climbing high on the ladder of musical-comedy success.

Seldom has Jeanette MacDonald had a better opportunity for both her dramatic and vocal abilities. For the first time since "San Francisco" she carries the vocal honors singly. Her songs have been wisely selected to please diversified audiences. There are favorites of the Gay Nineties, grand opera selections, and a dash of the day's hit tunes. In each case the songs are set against colorful backgrounds.

Lew Ayres, as Miss MacDonald's composer-pianist husband, gets his best role to date. He is ideally suited for the part and turns in an outstanding performance.

Ian Hunter forms an interesting third point to the romantic triangles and comedy is split three ways between thealways hilarious Frank Morgan, as a Broadway theatrical producer, and his two chorus-girl shadows, Virginia Grey and Rita Johnson who battle to the death for his affections.

X-ray Is Safeguard In Thymus Troubles

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D

One of the vivid recollections of my boyhood is that of a playfellow who was killed suddenly in a game of baseball. We were playing scrub and he was somewhere around first base and a batted ball hit him in the chest. It was not batted very hard and the impact was not severe, but he fell down, took a few gasping breaths and passed out.

It was the first time most of us had ever seen death and, poor kids, we didn't know what it was, or what to do. Fortunately for us, it was in the days when a doctor might come by with a horse and buggy, and nice old Doctor Jenny stopped his progress and took the boy in his arms and carried him home to his mother.

The remorse of the batter passes all description. I see him now every once in a while in some nook or cranny of this wicked world, and he never fails to bring up in an awed whisper the recollection of that dreadful afternoon.

Thymic Death

I have no doubt, as I look back on it, that this was thymic death, and had our valiant first baseman lived a little longer he would have been in a state of status thymico-lymphaticus.

We described the thymus gland yesterday, that large pink mass of spongy tissue that lies in the chest just behind the breast bone. It atrophies after adolescence, after growth and maturity have occurred.

But sometimes it doesn't. Sometimes it persists and we have the picture of status thymico-lymphaticus. These individuals have a very characteristic appearance. The old doctors would say they had a lymphatic constitution. They have a pale, whitish, waxy complexion. The hair is very fine and rather scant. They are plump, well padded with fat and almost invariably blond. The tonsils and adenoids are likely to be large—the thymus is similar in structure to the tonsils (lymphoid tissue—and they are liable to grow back again if removed.

They catch cold easily and have a very low resistance to any infection or contagion. They catch anything that is going around.

And they are very liable to sudden death. Sometimes this occurs in the form of apoplexy, sometimes from a heart seizure. Certainly the thymus has something to do with the shock mechanism of the body.

If the condition is recognized, a great deal can be done to safeguard these individuals from their dangers. The thymus can be reduced in size or even completely destroyed in size or even completely destroyed by the x-ray. This treatment is effective in selective cases, and observers who have watched these patients over a period of a quarter of a century see no bad results. The thymic individual can eat large quantities of sugar and starch, and a diet high i nthese elements is good for them. They must be protected from many of the stresses and exposures of life, such as tougher hombres like you and me take in our stride.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Mr. C. J. W.: "I have a rash on my right hand which has been coming off and on now for a couple of years. It starts with a white blister which breaks open. Then the skin gets dry, hard, scaly, and cracks open. What could I do for it?"

Answer: The condition that you describe may possibly be ringworm of the hands.

In ringworm of the hands, the type of rash that is present is variable. Usually the rash consists of reddish spots which are scaly. These spots may have small blisters around the outside of them and are usually lighter in the center. Patients with this condition often have ringworm of the feet also.

In treating this disorder, one of the helpful preparations is made with salicylic (sal-is-il-ik) acid, two parts; benzoic (ben-zo-ik) acid, three parts; cold cream and petrolatum, equal parts enough to make thirty.

The ointment is put on once or twice a day, under the physician's directions, and rubbed gently into the skin.

If this does not clear up the condition, X-ray treatments may be required. Ultra-violet ray treatments of the infected parts are sometimes helpful.

Early Rise in Stock Market Gives Way to Declines in the Afternoon

Many Traders Cash Profits In Million Share Day

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, May 25. (AP)—Traders had a rare chance to cash profits in today's stock market and most took advantage of the opportunity.

After a forenoon's upswing, in which the ticker tape was behind for a brief interval at the opening, the pace slackened appreciably and early gains running to 2 or more points were cut down or replaced with declines in many instances at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks retained a net advance of .1 of a point at 46.9. Transfers amounted to 1,010,850 shares compared with 1,013,680 yesterday. At that, it was the second largest day's volume since April 12.

Motors were among the first to slip in the closing hour. Among isolated wide gainers were Allied Chemical, U. S. Gypsum and Owens-Illinois, up 3 to 4 points. Modest improvement was retained by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Greyhound Corp., Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Southern Pacific, Phelps Dodge, J. C. Penney and Westinghouse.

Off as much as a point were General Motors, Chrysler, Glenn Martin, Anaconda, Texas Corp., Santa Fe, Du Pont and U. S. Rubber.

Lockheed added 1⅝ points in livedy curb dealings and fractional gains were scored by Niagara Hudson Power and Aviation and Transport. American Airlines spurted 5 and Aluminum Co., 3. Electric Bond and Share dipped narrowly. Turnover of 162,000 shares, largest in 6 weeks, compared with 112,000 Wednesday.

Early Rise in Stock Market Gives Way to Declines in the Afternoon

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, May 25. (AP)—Traders had a rare chance to cash profits in today's stock market and most took advantage of the opportunity.

After a forenoon's upswing, in which the ticker tape was behind for a brief interval at the opening, the pace slackened appreciably and early gains running to 2 or more points were cut down or replaced with declines in many instances at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks retained a net advance of .1 of a point at 46.9. Transfers amounted to 1,010,850 shares compared with 1,013,680 yesterday. At that, it was the second largest day's volume since April 12.

Motors were among the first to slip in the closing hour. Among isolated wide gainers were Allied Chemical, U. S. Gypsum and Owens-Illinois, up 3 to 4 points. Modest improvement was retained by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Greyhound Corp., Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Southern Pacific, Phelps Dodge, J. C. Penney and Westinghouse.

Off as much as a point were General Motors, Chrysler, Glenn Martin, Anaconda, Texas Corp., Santa Fe, Du Pont and U. S. Rubber.

Lockheed added 1¾ points in lively curb dealings and fractional gains were scored by Niagara Hudson Power and Aviation and Transport. American Airlines spurted 5 and Aluminum Co., 3. Electric Bond and Share dipped narrowly. Turnover of 162,000 shares, largest in 6 weeks, compared with 112,000 Wednesday.

Anxious Relatives Seek Information About the Squalus

Some Learn of Deaths Others Find Kin among Rescued

Portsmouth, N. H., May 25. (AP) — Above the clicking of typewriters, the incessant ringing of telephones and the babble of voices in the press room of the Portsmouth navy yard here rose an uncontrolled sob, and tenderly a weeping woman was assisted to an adjoining room.

Mrs. Eugene A. Hoffman, of Brooklyn, Mich., had been informed that her husband, a machinist mate, first class, was among those listed as dead aboard the sunken submarine Squalus.

Hundreds of miles away in a Washington, D. C., railroad station, Roumanian born Mrs. Robert Franklin Gibbs, who had not seen her husband in two years, learned through German newspaper headlines of her husband's fate. Tearfully, she boarded a train for Portsmouth. She had left Lexington, S. C., for a reunion with her husband, unaware of the accident.

Good News for Some

In Portsmouth and again hundreds of miles away—Chicago—the wife of one survivor and the father of another expressed the relief of those whose loved ones had been saved.

"I felt about 75 years old before I heard my husband's name and almost lost hope," said pretty red-haired Mrs. Carlton B. Powell, 23, speaking to newsmen here. "Now I feel my own age."

Powell is a machinist's mate.

"Oh, that's fine!" exclaimed Fred A. Nichols, of Chicago, when he was informed his son, Lieut. J. G. Nichols was safe. "But tell me have you news of the others? Let us hope all can be saved."

In the mill cities of Lowell and New Bedford, Mass., two mothers, worn with anxiety, had but a single thought when told their sons were safe.

Mother Thanks God

"Thank God;" said Mrs. William F. Fitzpatrick, of Lowell, mother of William J. Fitzpatrick.

"Thank God!" exclaimed Mrs. Adeline Madeiros, of New Bedford, mother of Leonard S. Madeiros.

That thought was repeated in Greenwich, O., where another mother, Mrs. John Washburn, a telephone operator, said happily "there is a God in heaven," when the navy wired her "Robert is alive and well."

But those who saw her will not forget the picture of an unnerved and unidentified wife of a member of the Squalus crew. With the tiny hand of her six-year-old son clasped tightly in hers, she walked back and forth across the bridge leading into Portsmouth.

And the child never complained.

What a Difference Balanced Nourishment* for Breakfast Makes

First of all, it's a mighty tasty bowlful. Because in the making of National Biscuit Shredded Wheat we unloose the true inner flavor of pure whole wheat.

By an ingenious process we drench the plump wheat kernels with steam until the innermost flavor cells burst open. Then quickly we press the tender grain into fragrant strands, form into biscuits and bake them to a tempting light brown crispness.

There's a generous quota of balanced nourishment in a breakfast of National Biscuit Shredded Wheat—in two biscuits plus a cupful of milk and your favorite fruit, you get seven vital food essentials for the muscles, nerves, blood, teeth and bones.

*Just try 2 National Biscuit Shredded Wheat, pour on a cupful of milk and enjoy it with your favorite fruit.

Parents Tempted To Lie In Writing Excuses

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

In this column several months ago I deplored the fact that some parents, in order to shield their adolescent children from punishment at school, and themselves from social disapproval, will lie to the principal when writing excuses for absences.

Then came a letter from a mother who, not condoning the parent practice I condemned, called my attention to a school rule about absences which tempt parents to lie. She said, "In our city a child can be excused from school only for illness or because of a death in the family." Such was the rule in New York City when I taught there. Such, too, I have found upon inquiry, is the present rule in many town and city school systems. I understand some states have made it so by statute.

Therefore, if Mother wishes to take her daughter shopping or go with her to meet some friends for lunch downtown; or Dad should wish to have his son meet him at the club on a school day, or choose to take him on a hunting or fishing trip, to an exhibit of some outstanding dramatic or musical performance, he or she will have to write a lie, or subject the child to school discipline.

What most parents do in such an instance is to write like this, "Please excuse Jim's absence yesterday afternoon. He was ill."

More Value?

Now any one of the named experiences might have much more character and personality value to your child than his being at school. If school authorities are really interested in education of the child, why should they not encourage the best sort? Wouldn't it be better to persuade parents and their adolescent children to go places together than to punish them for doing so? Why should the public school try to prohibit the very thing which tends to promote good parent-like relationships and happy family life?

But this rule is such a handy thing for the principal. He can "pass the buck" to the Board of Education, and set a clerk to recording the excuses—no matter about the morals and the best education of the child.

I should like to hear from my readers on this subject, from children as well as parents. If most parents don't think this good "prohibition," why not let public opinion force its repeal? If the school wants to go on forcing parents to lie, and parents wish to be so forced, why worry?

Asks for Bids

Baltimore, May 25, (AP)—The state roads commission asked bids to be opened June 6, on a $130,000 bridge to carry the Western Maryland railroad tracks over Elizabeth Street in Hagerstown. The change would relocate the street and by-pass. Virginia traffic bound west around the congested section of the city.

Bids were also advertised for the construction of a box culvert on the Monkton-Sheppard road in Baltimore county.

The carpet, 73½x28 feet, cost about $5,000.

Roosevelt Policies Leading to 'Disaster,' Tydings Says

Maryland Senator Flays New Deal In New York Talk

'Staggering Appropriations and Recurring Deficits' Draw Fire

New York, May 25 (AP) — Senator Tydings (D-Md), declaring tonight that Roosevelt administration policies are leading to "disaster," called for an educational campaign to "turn the flank of this movement."

The campaign, he said, should inform 50,000,000 workers that their greatest hope for prosperity lies in a revival of industry.

The Maryland senator, object of an unsuccessful "purge' effort' by President Roosevelt last summer, criticized administration spending sharply in an address prepared for the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Maps Eight-Point Program

He mapped an eight-point program which he predicted would go a long way toward restoring business confidence and creating employment for the idle. His suggestions were:

Reorganization of the Federal government for both efficiency and economy.

Consolidation of all Federal borrowing activities in the Treasury so that all obligations might be made a part of the government business statement.

A "purge" of relief rolls, coupled with a requirement for local contributions to the cost of relief.

A tax program "that raises sufficient revenue to at least approximate the staggering appropriations and recurring deficits of the present day."

Asks Wagner Act Revision

Revision of the Wagner act to give an employer "the right to speak out and act when he believes that influences are attempting not to help, but exploit those who work with them."

Revision of the Social Security act to place it on a "pay as you go" basis.

Removal of expenditure of public funds "from one-man domination."

Resistance to encroachment by any of the three branches of government on the other.

Tydings said he agreed with a statement of President Roosevelt in an address before retailers in Washington Monday that "it would be bad for business to shift any further (tax) burden to consumers x x x."

Hits Big Debt

"But the President did not say," Tydings added, "that eventually it will be the consumers of this nation who are going to pay off the tremendous debt which the present administration is foisting upon many generations to come."

Asserting that it would take sixty years to bring the national debt down to where it was eight years ago, if it were reduced $500,000,000 a year, Tydings asserted that "self-styled and pseudo liberals" are "selling the American people into economic slavery."

"Always they proclaim that next year, as a result of government spending, the income of the country is to be increased twenty to thirty per cent," he said. "In the meantime, while they spend, elect and experiment, the army of unemployed mills about the streets of our cities and towns as it has done for the past ten years. In the meantime, agriculture has known few periods of even remote prosperity. x x x"

Five Miners Acquitted Of Conspiring To Beat Superintendent of Mine

Williamson, W. Va., May 25 (AP) — Five miners were acquitted today of a charge of conspiring to assault Frank Carothers, superintendent of the Puritan mine, who was seriously beaten after the discharge of two men.

A jury which heard witnesses place four of the defendants far beyond striking distance of Carothers deliberated an hour and fifteen minutes before reaching the verdict.

Leck Accord, one of the defendants, told the jury he stood within a few feet of the mine official in a crewd of about thirty other employes and asked that he and his "buddy," Claude Murphy, be reinstated.

Accord said he did not strike Carothers and did not see a blow struck.

The four others, Armel Gillman, Harley Dempsey, Jess Dempsey and Jim Compton, testified they were too far away to have participated in any assault and denied any preconceived plot to harm Carothers.

New Methodist Bishop Honored at Fairmont

Fairmont, W. Va., May 25. (AP)—Bishop John Calvin Broomfield, recently elevated at the unification congress of the Methodist church, was honored today at a civic luncheon.

For 23 years Bishop Broomfield was pastor of the Methodist temple here.

Judge Harry Shaw, a close friend, was the principal speaker.

Mining Camp Joins 'Ghost Towns' As Big McKell Operation Closes

Mt. Hope, W. Va., May 25. (AP)—The mining camp of Kilsyth appeared slated today to join a dozen other Loup Creek "ghost" towns after an announcement the McKell Coal and Coke Company's big mine would not reopen.

W. R. Ballard, general manager of the company, said:

"The Siltix mine is defintiely and permanently closed. We are drawing the steel (trackage) today."

He declined further comment on Siltix and had nothing to say about the other McKell mines at Tamroy and Oswald.

About 250 miners are affected by the decision of one of the few West Virginia companies which never had a contract with the United Mine Workers of America.

All three mines shut down April 1 upon expiration of the old Appalachian agreement. After the new "union shop" contract between operators and he UMWA was signed May 13, McKell posted work notices for the following Monday.

UMWA pickets were thrown about the entrances, and no one returned to work.

Since that time the work notices have been removed.

The Siltex mine produced 140,535 tons of Sewell seam coal in 1939.

The three mines are located on Loup Creek, once one of the most famed of the state's rich mining areas. Within the past ten years Sun, Dunlop, Turkey Knob, Sugar Creek and Derryville—all once busy towns—have faded into obscurity as the mines around which they were built declined.

Peagrowers Sign Co-Op Agreement

Nearly 300 Garrett Farmers in 'Partnership' with Canning Co.

Oakland, May 25 — The first step in the peagrowers' cooperative canning venture, signing of an agreement, has turned out successfully, with practically every grower acquiescing. The results of the remainder of the project however, will depend upon the future developments of production, canning, marketing and sale price.

The cooperative arrangement between the growers and the Mt. Airy Canning Company plant at Loch Lynn Heights was entered into early in April, which allowed the former an opportunity to grow and market peas again this year. The price per ton, however, will depend upon the net profit received by the canning company after expenses of canning and marketing have been deducted.

The canning company officials had previously decided not to operate at Loch Lynn this year because of an oversupply in the market last year. Because a number of peagrowers did not wish to lose this early cash crop, however, they worked out a plan with company officials to operate on a cooperative basis.

The first step needed was to have all pea growers sign the contract. It was estimated that there were approximately 300 pea growers in the county interested in production last year. Clifton E. Sponseller, manager of the canning company plant, stated this week that practivally every one had signed the agreement and that 4,000 bushels of seed had been distributed and planted during the latter part of April.

Mr. Sponseller said there are about 1,000 acres of peas planted by the 300 growers. This acreage is less per grower than last year.

The next step in the agreement is up to Mother Nature, and after that the marketing problem will be one upon which the success of the project really depends. It was estimated that the growers received last year $100,000 from the sale of their peas to the canning company, with the latter organization contracting for the peas at $52.00 per ton. This year growers may get less or they may possibly receive more, depending upon conditions this fall.

Talks by Preachers Mark Fellowship Dinner at Brethren Church

Meyersdale, Pa., May 25—The annual fellowship dinner sponsored by the Men's Organization of the Church of the Brethren was held Tuesday evening in the social rooms of the church. Approximately 125 members of the organization and their friends were present.

Galen Peck served as toastmaster. The guest speakers of the evening were the Rev. V. N. Leatherman, of Berlin, pastor of the Brethren church; and James E. McCartney, of Meyersdale, president of the Somerset County Sunday School Association. Short talks were given by the Rev. DeWitt L. Miller, pastor of the local Church of the Brethren, and John Peck, of Maple Glen.

The young men's quartet of the Cumberland, Md., Church of the Brethren, sang several numbers, including Negro spirituals, hymns and popular airs, and were roundly applauded by the audience.

The meal was prepared and served under the direction of the True Blue Class of the Sunday School.

Flower Show

The members of the Meyersdale Garden Club, at their monthly meeting yesterday afternoon in the American Legion hall, presented their first club flower show with sixty entries of fine cut flowers and potted plants. Ribbons were awarded the winners, and many of the flower lovers of town and vicinity admired the display.

The president of the club, Mrs. A. S. Kresge, presided during the display. The committee in charge of the show was composed of Mrs. Clarence Rowe, chairman; Mrs. Norman Barnhart, Mrs. Harry T. Staub, Mrs. Ernest Livengood, Mrs. Joe Pasquale and Mrs. John T. Shipley.

Alumni Banquet

The golden anniversary of the Meyersdale high school, which is being commemorated during the present graduation season, was further celebrated last evening when the annual banquet and reunion of the alumni association was held at Zion Lutheran church with more than 300 members and guests present. The alumni association, as is customary, was host to the 93 members of the class of 1939, who will receive their diplomas at the commencement exercises to be held in the high school auditorium tomorrow evening.

Attorney Frank S. Lucente, of Somerset, served as toastmaster at the banquet, and the guest speaker was the Rev. Harry Allen Price, pastor of Asbury Methodist church, Pittsburgh, a former pastor of the local Methodist church. Miss Anna Grof, one of the two members of the class that first graduated from the local high school, was an honored guest, and also delivered an address.

Following the banquet and reunion, a dance was held in the high school gymnasium to music furnished by Jerry Mann's orchestra, of Indiana, Pa.

New Scout Troop

Paul E. Fuller, assistant scoutmaster of Boy Scout Troop 3, which is headed by Scoutmaster Bert N. Tubbs, was chosen scoutmaster of the new troop now in process of organization. Scoutmaster Tubbs has made arrangements for the transfer of Mr. Fuller from his troop to the new troop and is assisting in the organization.

Scoutmaster Fuller has chosen as his assistants William Beynon, Glenn Lybarger and Eddie Swearman. Harold Horning will be transferred from Troop 3 to be junior assistant scoutmaster of the new organization.

The following were chosen to serve on the troop committee: Prof. D. H. Bauman, D. Guy Floto, Dr. William P. Cover, Floyd P. Keefer and Josef Tressler.

Training Camp Robbed By Youth Coach Aided

Huntington, W. Va., May 25 (AP) — Nineteen-year-old Samuel Summers, befriended and given a job last fall by Athletic Coach Jule Ward of Morris Harvey college, admitted the theft of jewelry and cash valued at about $500 from the college football training camp, State Trooper Joe Hutchinson said today.

Hutchinson brought the youth from Charleston for arraignment. Three Morris Harvey football players there yesterday recognized Summers on the street and captured him after a chase.

Fiduciary Elects Bluefield Banker

Guy Lawhead Named Head of W. Va. Corporate Fiduciary Society

Lawhead succeeded R. E. Plott of Charleston.

W. P. Welker of Wheeling, secretary-treasurer this year, was chosen vice-president and W. H. Davisson of Clarksburg was named secretary-treasurer.

Plott proposed at the session a midwinter meeting to increase the effectiveness of the society and C. A. Boone of Huntington, president of the bankers, suggested creation of an investment division. Both propositions will be discussed later.

F. Brian Reuter, vice-president of the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh, discussed the problems of bank investment and expressed himself optimistically regarding the future.

He said he believed the United States will enjoy "periods of sound business expansion based on sane exploitation of the abundance of our natural resources." Reuter added:

"The redistribution of profits through more enlightened treatment of labor, through pensions and old age bounties and through higher cost of government are fixed charges on our nation's business which may never be removed. x x x A great part of it will be borne by capital through decreases in wages paid to capital, namely interest rates on money."

Steel Concern May Discontinue Delaware Charter, Reports Say

Charleston, W. Va., May 25. (AP)—A West Virginia charter was issued today to the Weirton Steel Company, which has been operating in the state more than 35 years.

Eighty shares were listed for F. M. Hesse, one of the incorporators, and ten shares each for Paul E. Shroads, and M. E. Arden, also of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Roosevelt At Arthurdale

First Lady, Back at Favorite Resettlement Project, Speaks Today

By CHARLES FRY

Arthurdale, W. Va., May 25 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt came back today to visit her favorite resettlement homestead and give her fourth commencement address tomorrow to graduates of the Community high school.

On the way from the White House, the First Lady and her party first stopped here, then toured the bleak Scott's Run mining villages near Morgantown where many of the homesteaders lived before Arthurdale was built in 1933. Her request that she make the trip without newsmen or photographers was followed.

Mrs. Roosevelt many times has visited the homestead and watched it grow into a far-flung community of 165 homes, schools and community buildings. The President, too, visited the project last year and spoke to the graduates, delivering a momentous address on taxation.

The graduation ceremonies will be held tomorrow afternoon in the school gymnasium, banked with rhododendron blooms, the State flower. In addition to Mrs. Roosevelt, Acting President Charles E. Lawall of West Virginia University, also will speak.

Tomorrow night, with members of her party, Mrs. Roosevelt will join in a square dance honoring her and the twelve graduates. On her trips here in the past, the First Lady many times has whirled and skipped to the tunes of "Turkey in the Straw" and other square dance favorites.

Those accompanying Mrs. Roosevelt here included Mrs. Henry Morgenthau Jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Roosevelt Policies Leading to 'Disaster,' Tydings Says

Maryland Senator Flays New Deal In New York Talk

'Staggering Appropriations and Recurring Deficits' Draw Fire

New York, May 25 (AP) — Senator Tydings (D-Md), declaring tonight that Roosevelt administration policies are leading to "disaster," called for an educational campaign to "turn the flank of this movement."

The campaign, he said, should inform 50,000,000 workers that their greatest hope for prosperity lies in a revival of industry.

The Maryland senator, object of an unsuccessful "purge" effort by President Roosevelt last summer, criticized administration spending sharply in an address prepared for the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Maps Eight-Point Program

He mapped an eight-point program which he predicted would go a long way toward restoring business confidence and creating employment for the idle. His suggestions were:

Reorganization of the Federal government for both efficiency and economy.

Consolidation of all Federal borrowing activities in the Treasury so that all obligations might be made a part of the government business statement.

A "purge" of relief rolls, coupled with a requirement for local contributions to the cost of relief.

A tax program "that raises sufficient revenue to at least approximate the staggering appropriations and recurring deficits of the present day."

Asks Wagner Act Revision

Revision of the Wagner act to give an employer "the right to speak out and act when he believes that influences are attempting not to help, but exploit those who work with them."

Revision of the Social Security act to place it on a "pay as you go" basis.

Removal of expenditure of public funds "from one-man domination."

Resistance to encroachment by any of the three branches of government on the other.

Tydings said he agreed with a statement of President Roosevelt in an address before retailers in Washington Monday that "it would be bad for business to shift any further (tax) burden to consumers x x x."

Hits Big Debt

"But the President did not say," Tydings added, "that eventually it will be the consumers of this nation who are going to pay off the tremendous debt which the present administration is foisting upon many generations to come."

Asserting that it would take sixty years to bring the national debt down to where it was eight years ago, if it were reduced $500,000,000 a year, Tydings asserted that "self-styled and pseudo liberals" are "selling the American people into economic slavery."

"Always they proclaim that next year, as a result of government spending, the income of the country is to be increased twenty to thirty per cent," he said. "In the meantime, while they spend, elect and experiment, the army of unemployed mills about the streets of our cities and towns as it has done for the past ten years. In the meantime, agriculture has known few periods of even remote prosperity. x x x"

Five Miners Acquitted Of Conspiring To Beat Superintendent of Mine

Williamson, W. Va., May 25 (AP) — Five miners were acquitted today of a charge of conspiring to assault Frank Carothers, superintendent of the Puritan mine, who was seriously beaten after the discharge of two men.

A jury which heard witnesses place four of the defendants far beyond striking distance of Carothers deliberated an hour and fifteen minutes before reaching the verdict.

Leck Accord, one of the defendants, told the jury he stood within a few feet of the mine official in a crowd of about thirty other employes and asked that he and his "buddy," Claude Murphy, be reinstated.

Accord said he did not strike Carothers and did not see a blow struck.

The four others, Armel Gillman, Harley Dempsey, Jess Dempsey and Jim Compton, testified they were too far away to have participated in any assault and denied any preconceived plot to harm Carothers.

New Methodist Bishop Honored at Fairmont

Fairmont, W. Va., May 25. (AP)—Bishop John Calvin Broomfield, recently elevated at the unification congress of the Methodist church, was honored today at a civic luncheon.

For 23 years Bishop Broomfield was pastor of the Methodist temple here.

Mining Camp Joins 'Ghost Towns' As Big McKell Operation Closes

Mt. Hope, W. Va., May 25. (AP)—The mining camp of Kilsyth appeared slated today to join a dozen other Loup Creek "ghost" towns after an announcement the McKell Coal and Coke Company's big mine would not reopen.

W. R. Ballard, general manager of the company, said:

"The Siltix mine is defintiely and permanently closed. We are drawing the steel (trackage) today."

He declined further comment on Siltix and had nothing to say about the other McKell mines at Tamroy and Oswald.

About 250 miners are affected by the decision of one of the few West Virginia companies which never had a contract with the United Mine Workers of America.

All three mines shut down April 1 upon expiration of the old Appalachian agreement. After the new "union shop" contract between operators and he UMWA was signed May 13, McKell posted work notices for the following Monday.

UMWA pickets were thrown about the entrances, and no one returned to work.

Since that time the work notices have been removed.

The McKell company is one of the better known southern West Virginia operations and has been closely identified with Fayette county's economic life for many years.

The Siltex mine produced 140,535 tons of Sewell seam coal in 1939.

The three mines are located on Loup Creek, once one of the most famed of the state's rich mining areas. Within the past ten years Sun, Dunlop, Turkey Knob, Sugar Creek and Derryville—all once busy towns—have faded into obscurity as the mines around which they were built declined.

Peagrowers Sign Co-Op Agreement

Nearly 300 Garrett Farmers in 'Partnership' with Canning Co.

Oakland, May 25 — The first step in the peagrowers' cooperative canning venture, signing of an agreement, has turned out successfully, with practically every grower acquiescing. The results of the remainder of the project however, will depend upon the future developments of production, canning, marketing and sale price.

The cooperative arrangement between the growers and the Mt. Airy Canning Company plant at Loch Lynn Heights was entered into early in April, which allowed the former an opportunity to grow and market peas again this year. The price per ton, however, will depend upon the net profit received by the canning company after expenses of canning and marketing have been deducted.

The canning company officials had previously decided not to operate at Loch Lynn this year because of an oversupply in the market last year. Because a number of peagrowers did not wish to lose this early cash crop, however, they worked out a plan with company officials to operate on a cooperative basis.

The first step needed was to have all pea growers sign the contract. It was estimated that there were approximately 300 pea growers in the county interested in production last year. Clifton E. Sponseller, manager of the canning company plant, stated this week that practivally every one had signed the agreement and that 4,000 bushels of seed had been distributed and planted during the latter part of April.

Mr. Sponseller said there are about 1,000 acres of peas planted by the 300 growers. This acreage is less per grower than last year.

The next step in the agreement is up to Mother Nature, and after that the marketing problem will be one upon which the success of the project really depends. It was estimated that the growers received last year $100,000 from the sale of their peas to the canning company, with the latter organization contracting for the peas at $52.00 per ton. This year growers may get less or they may possibly receive more, depending upon conditions this fall.

Mrs. Roosevelt At Arthurdale

First Lady, Back at Favorite Resettlement Project, Speaks Today

By CHARLES FRY

Arthurdale, W. Va., May 25 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt came back today to visit her favorite resettlement homestead and give her fourth commencement address tomorrow to graduates of the Community high school.

On the way from the White House, the First Lady and her party first stopped here, then toured the bleak Scott's Run mining villages near Morgantown where many of the homesteaders lived before Arthurdale was built in 1933. Her request that she make the trip without newsmen or photographers was followed.

Mrs. Roosevelt many times has visited the homestead and watched it grow into a far-flung community of 165 homes, schools and community buildings. The President, too, visited the project last year and spoke to the graduates, delivering a momentous address on taxation.

The graduation ceremonies will be held tomorrow afternoon in the school gymnasium, banked with rhododendron blooms, the State flower. In addition to Mrs. Roosevelt, Acting President Charles E. Lawall of West Virginia University, also will speak.

Tomorrow night, with members of her party, Mrs. Roosevelt will join in a square dance honoring her and the twelve graduates. On her trips here in the past, the First Lady many times has whirled and skipped to the tunes of "Turkey in the Straw" and other square dance favorites.

Those accompanying Mrs. Roosevelt here included Mrs. Henry Morgenthau Jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury.

View of a Section of the Barton School Community Library

Barton, May 25.—Four months of rapid growth of the first school community library in Allegany county, has marked the Barton School-Community Library as a project of note. This worthwhile project has been the nucleus of other such projects of this type in this county. Good library facilities in a small community are rare, yet one can find these good facilities at the local library.

The library project came about through the cooperation of available agencies brought together by William P. Cooper, director of guidance at the local school. Quarters in the school building were made available through the support of Gilbert C. Cooling, principal, and the board of education. F. W. Springer, W.P.A. area representative; Miss Rose Watkins, state W.P.A. supervisor of library projects; Mrs. Karl G. Perry, Allegany county supervisor of library projects and Carlton Schuller, N.Y.A. district supervisor, all visited Barton, investigated the needs of the school and community and approved the worthwhile project.

Graduates Certified

Under the direction of Mrs. Karl G. Perry, Allegany county supervisor of library projects, and Miss Bella Tonry, librarian of the Westernport library, former graduates of the Barton school were certified and assigned to work at the library project. Books were collected and put into condition, by this group of workers, preparatory to the opening of the library. In February, the library opened to the school and community. The response was more than enough to prove to all concerned that this project was filling a real need.

Early in March, Mrs. Mildred E. Kirkpatrick, a resident of this place was appointed as librarian. She had been specifically trained in this field with years of experience at the Enoch Pratt library, of Baltimore. Under her guidance the library is giving a superior type of service, completing unique posters and scrap books, which are to be found along with several other thousands of books and magazines. One of the pleasing features of the library for the smaller children is the weekly story hour, conducted by Mrs. Kirkpatrick.

Good Books are Read

Starting with a meager circulation, the approximate circulation numbers 2,500 books per month at the present, an indication that much reading of good material is being done. Modern library equipment is being built by the Lonaconing N.Y.A. furniture project, under the direction of Price Steiding, supervisor.

Community support of the project has been gratuitous. Benefit card parties have added to the funds. These, in addition to library funds available within the school, have made possible the purchase of many approved books. Through the kindness of patrons many books have been presented. A Boy Scout collection drive provided hundreds of them. The Hartford public library, Hartford, Conn.; the Newark public library, Newark, N. J.; and the Enoch Pratt library, of Baltimore, along with the neighboring Westernport public library have been generous with gifts of books.

Book Mending Project

Across the hall at the school building, in connection with the library a book-mending project is being carried on. More than two hundred books are renovated and rebound each month. This work is being done by former students of the school who were unable to find employment. Besides being a worthwhile project for education and the instilling of the reading of good books, the project has also provided an income to many of the town's residences and a help to the local business man.

Miss Elsie Gardiner, recreation expert of the state department of agriculture; Miss Adeline Pratt, director of the Maryland Public Library Advisory Commission; Miss Rose Watkins, state W.P.A. supervisor of library projects, and many others have recently visited the local library and were unanimous in their praise. Efficiency is guaranteed through the strict supervision of Mrs. Perry in her weekly visits, and the local N.Y.A. supervisor.

Arrangements have been made whereby the library will remain open during the summer months. Under the present plans the entire day will be taken up.

Klaas Moos, 105-year-old negro at Carnarvon, South Africa, sufcar struck him and ran over both car struck him an dran over both his legs.

Piedmont, May 25—The Piedmont Game and Fish Conservation club re-opened its shooting grounds at Keymont, near Piedmont, last week with Harry Keplinger again in charge.

Besides the clay bird trap and small calibre rifle ranges a new feature has been added this year in the form of a life-size moving deer which darts in and out of cover, making an elusive target to test the skill of any gunner. The high-powered rifle range, now under construction, will be completed in the near future.

The club extends an invitation to the public to attend its shoots, which are held each Friday evening at 5 o'clock, weather permitting, throughout the summer.

Baltimore Pastor Will Visit Church At Lonaconing

Rev. W. L. Lynn Will Preach at Methodist Memorial Service

Lonaconing, May 25.—The Rev. William L. Lynn, pastor of Grace Methodist church, Baltimore, former pastor of the local Methodist church, will be the guest minister Sunday evening, May 28, at 7:30 o'clock, at the first memorial services of the local church's Mite Society. The Rev. Mr. Lynn will use as his subject, "We Have Seen the Lord."

The Mite Society was first started in the local Methodist church, about sixty years ago, and the services Sunday will be the first memorial service ever conducted for the deceased members of the society. The group of women who belong to this society are very active in the church and through the efforts of the Rev. Lewis F. Ransom, pastor, and the officers of the organization, Mrs. Gilbson Humphrey, president; Mrs. Mary Cook, secretary, and Mrs. John Bradburn, treasurer, the services of Rev. Lynn were secured.

The Rev. Mr. Lynn first came to the local church in 1911, and administered to the Christian needs of the local Methodists until 1914, when he was placed in a larger church.

The church choir under the direction of Mrs. Lewis F. Ransom, has prepared special music for the evening, included in which will be several solos by the director.

Morning services in keeping with memorial Sunday will be conducted at 11 o'clock, by the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Ransom, at which time he will use as his subject, "Christianity or War?"

The public is invited to attend both memorial services.

Bean, county demonstrator, who has just returned from attending the funeral of her mother in David City, Neb., was the main speaker.

Mrs. Elsie Crosser was elected the delegate from this section to attend the Short Course at the University of Maryland, College Park, this summer.

A program was presented during the course of the evening, followed by refreshments.

Masked Bandit Wearing Black Robs Station

Threatens Attendant With Gun, Escapes With Only $6

"Gosh, it was my first night on the job and look what happened," 19-year-old Keith Cooper declared last night a few minutes after he was held up and robbed of $6 by a masked bandit at the new Spur service station on Wineow street.

Cooper, of 217 Smallwood street, reported for duty as a service station operator last night and had scarcely got started when a strange man stuck a gun in his ribs. The gun "was as big as a canon" the young man asserted last night.

"Get back where it's dark and give me your money," the robber told Cooper in a gruff voice.

Misses $40

However, the holdup was not a total loss, the new attendant remarked with a grin of elation. The holdup man pushed him to the rear of the well-lighted station and stripped Cooper of the $6 he had in his trousers pockets. But the robber overlooked $40 locked up in a box inside the station.

After obtaining the $6, the holdup man escaped over a small embankment behind the filling station.

Prior to the holdup, young Cooper was being shown around the place by another attendant, John J. Healy, 23, of 12 North Lee street. Healy showed Cooper around in back of the station and had started to go inside when he saw a strange man inside the station.

Buddy Gives Alarm

Healy had no sooner obtained a glimpse of the man than he sensed something wrong. He took to his heels and "ran just as fast as I could to the Green Palm restaurant and called the police."

Dumbfounded, Cooper watched the attendant running down the street and wondered "what was going on." He had been standing near the station when Healy started running and a few seconds later felt the gun in his ribs.

When police arrived, both young men stated that it was their belief that the holdup man had jumped off a freight and had been watching them for some time.

Bandit Wore Gloves

The two operators described the bandit as wearing a gray felt hat with a black band around it, a black suit and gloves. He weighed about 145 pounds and was described as being five feet, eight inches tall.

Due to the mask, the men could not tell whether the bandit was white or colored, they said. The robbery occurred about 10:45 p. m. The station is usually closed around 11:30, the men said.

City Opens War On Mosquitoes

Workmen Spread Oil In Catch Basins

Cumberland residents won't have so many mosquitoes to swat this summer if the program launched yesterday by Commissioner Edgar Reynolds works out successfully.

After consulting with Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, city and county health director, Commissioner Reynolds put a crew of men to work pouring oil in catch basins located in the city.

Working the theory that the time to kill the mosquito is before it grows up, the crew is pouring two or three pints of oil in each catch basin. Just enough oil to smear a coating over the water is all that is necessary, Reynolds said.

By keeping oil in the basins where mosquitoes breed, the city hopes to nip thes tinging brutes before they get started, the commissioner said.

Farewell Hymn Marks Close of Methodist Missionary Meeting

"God Be With You Till We Meet Again" was the song with which more than 100 members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Moorefield district of the Southern Methodist church adjourned their conference here yasterday.

The hymn had special significance, for the two-day meeting at Central Methodist church was the last one for the district as now constituted. Merger of the three branches of Methodism has caused a realignment of districts, and members from Maryland, West Virginia, and Virginia will no longer be in the same district, as is now the case.

Yesterday's concluding session was marked by greetings from representatives of the missionary societies of the Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Protestant churches of this section, now merged with the Southern Methodist church. The speakers were Mrs. A. L. Rogers and Mrs. V. R. Ice, both of Cumberland.

Other speakers included Miss Virginia Henry, of Front Royal, Va., director of young people's work on the Baltimore Conference Board of Christian Education; the Rev. Raymond Musser, of Moorefield, W. Va.; Mrs. S. R. Neel, of Cumberland; and the Rev. C. E. Brandt, of Romney, W. Va., presiding elder of the district.

Plan Rummage Sale

The St. Francis Circle of the Emanuel Episcopal Church will hold a rummage sale in the parish house Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

K. of C. To Name Honor Members

Ceremony Is First For Local Council

There must be a first time for everything, and Sunday at the Knights of Columbus Home will be the first time that any members of the council in the many years of its existence will be named Honorary Members of Cumberland Council No. 586, K. of C.

In fact with this initial induction of members to the honory stage, there will also be the raising of three of the sixteen to be so honored to the degree of "Honorary Life Members," and this will be another first for the annuals of the local council.

The members to be inducted to the honory degree are Frank A. Barley, Joseph A. Coleman, Thomas J. Doyle, Bart J. Finan, Peter V. Firlie, George L. Long, Joseph V. McKenna, Charles E. Mullan, John Niedballa, Michael F. O'Neill Sr., Frederick W. Rowe, Michael L. Sell, William D. Paisley, Charles J. Welsh and Michael J. Welsh.

The last named three, the Messrs. Welsh and Mr. Paisley are charter members of the council and will be named to life membership. In June Mr. Howe will be named a life member and in October Mr. Sell will also attain the age requirement of seventy-five to be named an honorary life member. It is only upon attaining the age of seventy-five years that the honorary members will be raised to the honorary life membership.

The induction ceremony will be part of the breakfast service which will follow the annual Communion Mass of the council, a practice inaugurated by Cumberland Council and now followed nationally by the Order.

George F. McDermott, chairman of the breakfast committee, will introduce Frank A. Wolfhope, past state deputy, who will speak for the members being honored. The presentation of medals will be made by J. Bernard Higgins, district deputy. Presiding will be Grand Knight Patrick J. Hopkins, assisted by C. P. Welsh, deputy grand knight; W. Ambrose Ryland, chancellor, and Thomas F. Connell, warden.

The Communion Mass, breakfast and conferring of honors on members will be part of the program celebrating the twenty-first anniversary of the council in its present home.

Wednesday evening an impressive memorial service was held at the home with the Rev. W. Joyce Russell delivering the eulogy. W. A. Gunter was chairman.

To Broadcast Talk On 'Poppy Day'

Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion auxiliary unit, announced yesterday that Mrs. David R. Allen and Mrs. Harry L. Vogel will give a talk on the meaning of "Poppy Day" over station WTBO today from 6:15 to 6:30 p. m.

The unit will hold its annual Poppy Day sale tomorrow. The imitation poppy flowers are made by disabled war veterans in hospitals, and the funds raised will be used for their benefit. Young women will sell them on the streets.

The committee in charge consists of Mrs. Allen, chairman, Mrs. George E. Banzhof, Mrs. Harry G. Spiker, Mrs. Harry D. Bogler, Mrs. Heyl D. Walker and Mrs. Vogel.

Summer Colony Planned In Bedford Vicinity

Plans to establish a new summer colony in the vicinity of Bedford, Pa., have been announced by the members of the Bedford Chamber of Commerce. Paul Young, president of the chamber, announced that Ralph Brown, of Bedford, has purchased a 465-acre tract along Route 220 on the Horseshoe Trail, about ten miles from Bedford. The owner plans to flood approximately 100 acres of the land to make an artificial lake and to build some 200 cottages.

amusement area. However, every day there is a formal opening of another building, and by the end of June the entire fair will be completed.

For each day of fair going, it is a good idea for the visitor to obtain a copy of the official program titled "Today at the Fair". This paper is only five cents (some days free) and lists the specified time of day or evening for all special events. i. e. the fountain display of the Lagoon of Nations begins every evening at 9 o'clock.

The Lagoon of Nations is a large pool by the Court of Peace in the Government zone. At 9 o'clock, with a musical concert, the fountains of the lagoon become a spray of light and color; colors gradually changing tone in accord with the music. There are three large fountains; the central one ascends as high as seventy feet into the air. The color is formed by gas vapor and actual flame appears from the base of the fountains.

All of the exhibits in Zone two, the Communications and Business Systems zone, are absolutely free. In fact, many people do not realize that all of the exhibition buildings are free with the exception of the shows in the amusement area.

At 10:30 p. m. a similar display of color fountains occurs on Fountain lake in the amusement area, plus a magnificent display of fireworks which can be seen from all points over the fair grounds. The displays are presented nightly and are well worth seeing.

Has Large Pylons

The Communications building is fronted by twin pylons 160 feet high. On the facade of the building is Savage's mural showing means of communication. The focal exhibit displays the method of communication from earliest times up to modern. The building houses several exhibits. The central section forms a large lounge space with comfortable chairs and ashtrays, and comfort stations are found at the end of the building. Outside of the building is a locker-check system, for checking coats or packages.

The Bell Telephone building is a center of much attraction, due to the fact that certain winners are granted the privilege of telephoning anyone in the United States free of charge, being allowed to sepak for three minutes. The point is, though, the people seated in the audience may listen in on your conversation through receivers. You should hear the audience roar when the sailors put through a cross-country call!

The Radio Corporation of America is another place of much interest in this zone. Here is presented a demonstration of television. A movie film is transmitted from the top of the Empire State building to the R.C.A. building in the fair grounds. Through modern television sets we see views of the George Washington bridge, followed by a short on safety in driving.

Dog Show Profit To Aid Wildlife

Plans Near Completion For Show Here Aug. 6

Proceeds of Cumberland's eighth annual American Kennel Club All-Bred Dog Show will be offered to the Western Maryland Wildlife Foundation, it was announced last night as plans for the affair neared competition.

The funds will be donated to the Foundation for the purpose of studying, and financing conservation of wildlife in Western Maryland, according to the executive committee of the Western Maryland Kennel Club, which will sponsor the dog show at the fair grounds August 6.

Officers of the organization said that negotiations are underway to bring to the Cumberland show the finest superintendent and judges available in this area. They pointed out that rules of the American Kennel Club forbid announcement of superintendent or judges until after their formal approval by that body.

Complete details of the show, including prizes and entry requirements, will be ready for distribution late in June, it was said.

Club officials said that they expected more than 300 entries for this year's renewal of Cumberland's "Canine classic."

William Landefeld Elected President Of Gephart P.-T.A.

Members of the Parent-Teacher association of Gephart school last night elected William Landefeld president for the next school year.

Other officers named at the last meeting of the current term were Richard Matlick, vice-president; Mrs. Albert Shade, secretary; and Mrs. Gaither Martin, treasurer.

Plans for the annual picnic were discussed and a committee named to complete arrangements for the affair, including Ward Wilson, Mrs. Milnor Bruce, Mrs. Stanley Hamilton, and Mrs. Edgar Wagner. The committee is to select the date and place.

The entertainment program was featured by a Memorial Day address by Clarence D. Valentine, a former president of the association.

Also on the program were a reading by Mrs. Melvin Little; a piano solo by James Trenton; selections by the Primary band; and dance numbers by pupils of the Winter Studio.

Members of the nominating committee were Mrs. Hannah Struckman Allamong, chairman; Nelson T. Warren, Mrs. B. J. Kilroy, Mrs. Oscar E. Bittinger, and William L. Zembower

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Cumberland merchants are dickering, through the chamber of commerce, with a firm which wants to put on one of those big Toy Land parades, with huge inflated animals and a host of terrible and comic looking creatures big as houses. The kids go for such parades, and of course papa and mama goes for anything that Junior likes.

The parade can be obtained for considerably less than $1,000, because the outfit that puts it on will have an open date between parades in Charlotte, N. C., and Baltimore.

The big creatures are motorized, of course, but the local sponsor would have to furnish 157 workmen to help prod them along and get their fat, billowy sides inflated.

The dates offered Cumberland are November 20 or 27, and the idea is to get people downtown to do their Christmas shopping early. It would likely draw a big crowd, and, of course, a record traffic jam.

—o—

We understand now that the big fireworks display planned for July 4 at the fair grounds is a fizzle to date. Every one is for it, every one wants to see some money raised for the Community Cheest, but there is no one around to put up the $1,500 necessary to buy the fireworks.

Now if 10,000 persons could be induced to come see the hour-long display of celestial light and thunder, and pay two bits for same, the returns would be $2,500, which would buy all the fireworks and leave a tidy sum over for the Community Chest. Showmen say that at least 10,000 people could be brought out for the show, but there's still the element of risk.

The Community Chest can't afford to gamble with the funds already contributed to it. So far no other group has come forward willing to undertake this thrilling community enterprise. Too bad.

The man, James R. Canfield Jr., of 934 Gay street, was arrested early yesterday morning on Maryland avenue by Officers John G. Powers and Curtis M. Kime when the car he was driving jumped the curb and crashed into the right side of a parked machine.

He was fined $100 and costs for operating an automobile while intoxicated and $10 and costs for reckless driving.

Another driver, Willard E. Otto, of Grantsville, was fined $10 in Police Court for reckless driving on North Centre street. He was apprehended by Officer George W. Deffenbaugh.

Hollywood Seeks Mayor's History But Dr. Koon Chuckles at 'Stardom'

Film producers, apparently, have finally decided that they don't necessarily need a glamour gal or a Bowery thug to make an entertaining motion picture.

Like Diogenes, one film outfit recently started going right to the source for reliable material and consequently it is not surprising to hear that they have finally come to the conclusion that not all public officials are necessarily corrupt and wallowing in sin.

The latest idea to sprout in the noodle of the film master minds is the production of a true-to-life film based on the biography of a representative mayor in a representative city.

Want Koon's Biography

And yesterday, the research department of Imperial Pictures, Inc., located Mayor Thomas W. Koon and requested him for a complete biography.

In a letter to Cumberland's veteran mayor, G. Bernhardt, of the Imperial staff, stated, "It is our plan to assemble in story form those actual activities and true experiences of a mayor which have the most appeal and the greatest dramatic value, without being an exaggeration in any way.

Want Honest Mayor

"So much has been written and so much has been seen in motion pictures of corrupt officials and corrupt politicians that we feel an honest portrayal of an honest personality would be a civic duty performed and more truthful entertainment.

"After a survey of the motion picture field, we firmly believe that a picture of this type would have great entertainment possibilities and a ready and wide circulation.

"We ask that you give us a complete biography of yourself with a series of interesting events in your career as mayor, which you believe will be of interest to the public. If you have any suggestions to make, we shall be only too happy to receive them."

Mayor Only Chuckles

Upon receipt of the letter, Mayor Koon chuckled a moment and then indicated that he had no time for writing biographies. He also indicated good naturedly that the biography wouldn't be written unless one of Cumberland's newspaper scribes wanted to transform himself into a scenario writer.

However, several persons who heard of the film company's request declared that the picture outfit had probably come to the right source for interesting material.

Dr. Koon has always been a double-barreled public servant inasmuch as he combines his duties as mayor with his practice as a physician. A doctor who has prescribed at sickbeds day and night as well as serving as mayor for twenty-three years might conceivably give Hollywood something to work with.

Who knows, perhaps Jean Hersholt, the man who played the part of Dr. Dafoe, may enact the life of Cumberland's mayor.

Woman Injured, Man Fined $50

Youth Claims Blow Only Accident

A 24-year-old Virginia avenue youth yesterday was fined $50 and costs in Trial Magistrates Court, although he denied striking a 21-year-old married woman in the hallway of her home last Monday night.

According to Mrs. Jane E. Chilcotte, Charles Hemmis, of First street and Virginia avenue, called at her home at 904 Lafayette avenue, last Monday night. Mrs. Chilcotte said that she was seperated from her husband.

The young woman testified that she and Hemmis were talking on the front porch of her home when he suddenly pushed her into the hallway and struck her on the mouth.

Tells Different Story

Hemmis, charged with assault and battery, told a different version regarding the episode. He declared that the woman obtained her swollen mouth and loosened teeth when his elbow accidentally collided with her face. The accident occurred when Mrs. Chilcotte stooped to pick up something she had dropped, he declared.

Trial Magistrate Frank A. Perdew listened intently as Hemmis related how he had taken Mrs. Chilcotte for an automobile ride in a borrowed car prior to the accident. He met her on the street, he declared.

When they returned from the ride, they met the friend from whom they had borrowed the car, Hemmis said. All three went out in the car to look for another girl, he said. Later, they left the friend and went to a beer parlor, the defendant declared.

After visiting the beer parlor, Mrs. Chilcotte accompanied him to his home, Hemmis said. They went there to listen to the radio, he told the court.

The accident occurred in his home, the defendant continued. Despite the fact that Mrs. Chilcotte had a badly bruised mouth, she remained for "one last kiss" before leaving, Hemmis said.

Magistrate Perdew said he had happened to notice Mrs. Chilcotte's mouth the morning the warrant was sworn out. He then fined Hemmis $50 and costs.

The defendant filed an appeal. He was not represented by an attorney.

Car Hits Child, Breaks Her Leg

Frostburg Girl Also Suffers Head Injuries

A four-year-old girl suffered severe injuries late yesterday afternoon when struck by a car as she played in the road in front of her home, on U. S. Route 40 just west of Frostburg.

The victim was Veronica Broadwater, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Broadwater. She suffered a broken right leg, a possible fractured skull, and severe contusions of the right arm when hit by an automobile driven by Edward L. Matticord, of Alliance, Ohio.

Attendants at Miners hospital, Frostburg, said her condition was not serious, and she is expected to recover.

Matticord, who was headed east, told State Trooper Carl G. Storm that the child suddenly darted into the path of his car and he was unable to stop in time to avoid striking her.

Officer Storm said that James Hugglestone, of 200 East Main street, Frostburg, told him that Matticord was driving at a "moderate rate of speed." Hugglestone was driving just behind the Ohio man, Storm said.

The scene of yesterday's accident on the east side of Big Savage mountain, about a half-mile west of Frostburg, is near the spot where James Forgach, 21, was killed when struck by a car on the night of May 3.

CIO Delegates Vote Sympathy

Many To Attend Rites For Mrs. Castle

Delegates to the Western Maryland Industrial Union Council meeting last night voted to suspend all business with the exception of one pressing problem out of respect to President Harry E. Castle, whose wife was fatally burned Wednesday in an accident at her home.

According to Vice-President James E. Collins, the delegates adopted a resolution of sympathy which was extended to President Castle. A large group was named to represent the Council at the funeral service Saturday at the Castle residence at 602 Fairview avenue.

The only other action taken by the CIO body was the adoption of a resolution supporting the campaign against the occupational disease bill and backing plans for obtaining signatures to petitions asking a referendum on the bill.

State's Attorney Brands Attack On Him False

Garrett Co. Official Takes Up Feud With State Forester

Oakland, May 25 — State's Attorney Neil C. Fraley emphatically denied today the charges leveled against him from Baltimore, Walter J. Quick, deputy state forester.

Fraley invited Quick to come to Garrett county and help get evidence on the many so-called incendiary fires, "instead of sitting in my office in Baltimore and giving out interviews to the press containing false and misleading statements."

Fraley referred to recent newspaper stories in which Quick complained that officials of several counties had failed to cooperate with foresters in catching firebugs. Fraley was the only one specifically named.

Quick said Fraley had "backed back" on a promise to take to the grand jury evidence against persons suspected of setting woods fires.

Fraley Quotes Records

Fraley pointed out today that records show that the grand jury adjourned March 23, and that the suspect mentioned was not brought before him for questioning until March 31 and again on April 1, making it impossible for him to have broken any promise, which he says he never made. The next grand jury is not until September.

The statement which Fraley issued today follows:

"The Associated Press dispatch appearing in the Cumberland News under date of May 23, quoting Walter J. Quick, deputy state forester, stating that I had gone back on my promise to take to the grand jury evidence against persons suspected of setting fires is absolutely false. I have never failed to bring to the grand jury any evidence that was ever submitted to me in a case investigated by the employes of the state forestry department.

Questioned Suspect

"The latter part of March a case was reported to me by the local forest guard and as a result of information furnished me I questioned twice a suspect. This information was not brought to me until after the March grand jury had just adjourned and obviously I had no opportunity to bring any evidence that was submitted to that grand jury.

"If there is the great number of forest fires of incendiary origin as claimed by Mr. Quick he would do better to come to Garrett county and make an effort to obtain evidence against those guilty of setting out fires instead of sitting in his office in Baltimore and giving out interviews to the press containing false and misleading statements."

Take Footprints

Quick reported last Friday approximately thirty forest fires were set in Garrett county, burning acres of timber. They were set, he said, by two groups. He also said that this spring Garrett county forest wardens consulted the federal department of justice about means to gather evidence. They began to take foot prints found near fires. Several weeks ago they had footprints taken from those made by Jerry Kelly, 81 years of age, of near Sang Run, twenty miles northwest of Oakland, who was seen near where some fires occurred. Kelly was twice questioned but released for lack of evidence.

Being guilty of setting fires is a criminal offense," Fraley said. "Simply because a man is seen in the vicinity of a fire is not evidence he is guilty. There must be proof for a criminal offense. My position as state's attorney is to protect the innocent as well as to prosecute the guilty."

St. Mary's Sophomores To Give Morality Play Brought Up to Date

A modern version of the medieval morality play will be given today at 2 p. m. by the sophomore class of St. Mary's high school in the school auditorium.

In this play, Communism, modernism and Catholic Action contend for the interest enthusiasm, and loyalty of the present day type of Catholic college student. Although the play has some live situations and sprightly dialogue, the directors say it is intended primarily to instruct unthinking youth.

The scene of action is the waiting room of Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, where a group of college girls have agreed to meet in order to talk over events before boarding trains, some for a holiday's-end trip, others for their respective colleges.

Masked Bandit Wearing Black Robs Station

Threatens Attendant With Gun, Escapes With Only $6

"Gosh, it was my first night on the job and look what happened," 19-year-old Keith Cooper declared last night a few minutes after he was held up and robbed of $6 by a masked bandit at the new Spur service station on Wineow street.

Cooper, of 217 Smallwood street, reported for duty as a service station operator last night and had scarcely got started when a strange man stuck a gun in his ribs. The gun "was as big as a canon" the young man asserted last night.

"Get back where it's dark and give me your money," the robber told Cooper in a gruff voice.

Misses $40

However, the holdup was not a total loss, the new attendant remarked with a grin of elation. The holdup man pushed him to the rear of the well-lighted station and stripped Cooper of the $6 he had in his trousers pockets. But the robber overlooked $40 locked up in a box inside the station.

After obtaining the $6, the holdup man escaped over a small embankment behind the filling station.

Prior to the holdup, young Cooper was being shown around the place by another attendant, John J. Healy, 23, of 12 North Lee street. Healy showed Cooper around in back of the station and had started to go inside when he saw a strange man inside the station.

Buddy Gives Alarm

Healy had no sooner obtained a glimpse of the man than he sensed something wrong. He took to his heels and "ran just as fast as I could to the Green Palm restaurant and called the police."

Dumbfounded, Cooper watched the attendant running down the street and wondered "what was going on." He had been standing near the station when Healy started running and a few seconds later felt the gun in his ribs.

When police arrived, both young men stated that it was their belief that the holdup man had jumped off a freight and had been watching them for some time.

Bandit Wore Gloves

The two operators described the bandit as wearing a gray felt hat with a black band around it, a black suit and gloves. He weighed about 145 pounds and was described as being five feet, eight inches tall.

Due to the mask, the men could not tell whether the bandit was white or colored, they said. The robbery occurred about 10:45 p. m. The station is usually closed around 11:30, the men said.

Workmen Spread Oil In Catch Basins

Cumberland residents won't have so many mosquitoes to swat this summer if the program launched yesterday by Commissioner Edgar Reynolds works out successfully.

After consulting with Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, city and county health director, Commissioner Reynolds put a crew of men to work pouring oil in catch basins located in the city.

Working the theory that the time to kill the mosquito is before it grows up, the crew is pouring two or three pints of oil in each catch basin. Just enough oil to smear a coating over the water is all that is necessary, Reynolds said.

By keeping oil in the basins where mosquitoes breed, the city hopes to nip thes tinging brutes before they get started, the commissioner said.

Farewell Hymn Marks Close of Methodist Missionary Meeting

"God Be With You Till We Meet Again" was the song with which more than 100 members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Moorefield district of the Southern Methodist church adjourned their conference here yesterday.

The hymn had special significance, for the two-day meeting at Central Methodist church was the last one for the district as now constituted. Merger of the three branches of Methodism has caused a realignment of districts, and members from Maryland, West Virginia, and Virginia will no longer be in the same district, as is now the case.

Yesterday's concluding session was marked by greetings from representatives of the missionary societies of the Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Protestant churches of this section, now merged with the Southern Methodist church. The speakers were Mrs. A. L. Rogers and Mrs. V. R. Ice, both of Cumberland.

Other speakers included Miss Virginia Henry, of Front Royal, Va., director of young people's work on the Baltimore Conference Board of Christian Education; the Rev. Raymond Musser, of Moorefield, W. Va.; Mrs. S. R. Neel, of Cumberland; and the Rev. C. E. Brandt, of Romney, W. Va., presiding elder of the district.

Mrs. Robert Sterrett, of Monterey, Va., presided at the sessions.

Plan Rummage Sale

The St. Francis Circle of the Emanuel Episcopal Church will hold a rummage sale in the parish house Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

K. of C. To Name Honor Members

Ceremony Is First For Local Council

There must be a first time for everything, and Sunday at the Knights of Columbus Home will be the first time that any members of the council in the many years of its existence will be named Honorary Members of Cumberland Council No. 586, K. of C.

In fact with this initial induction of members to the honory stage, there will also be the raising of three of the sixteen to be so honored to the degree of "Honorary Life Members," and this will be another first for the annuals of the local council.

The members to be inducted to the honory degree are Frank A. Barley, Joseph A. Coleman, Thomas J. Doyle, Bart J. Finan, Peter V. Firlie, George L. Long, Joseph V. McKenna, Charles E. Mullan, John Niedballa, Michael F. O'Neill Sr., Frederick W. Rowe, Michael L. Sell, William D. Paisley, Charles J. Welsh and Michael J. Welsh.

The last named three, the Messrs. Welsh and Mr. Paisley are charter members of the council and will be named to life membership. In June Mr. Howe will be named a life member and in October Mr. Sell will also attain the age requirement of seventy-five to be named an honorary life member. It is only upon attaining the age of seventy-five years that the honorary members will be raised to the honorary life membership.

The induction ceremony will be part of the breakfast service which will follow the annual Communion Mass of the council, a practice inaugurated by Cumberland Council and now followed nationally by the Order.

George F. McDermott, chairman of the breakfast committee, will introduce Frank A. Wolfhope, past state deputy, who will speak for the members being honored. The presentation of medals will be made by J. Bernard Higgins, district deputy. Presiding will be Grand Knight Patrick J. Hopkins, assisted by C. P. Welsh, deputy grand knight; W. Ambrose Ryland, chancellor, and Thomas F. Connell, warden.

The Communion Mass, breakfast and conferring of honors on members will be part of the program celebrating the twenty-first anniversary of the council in its present home.

Wednesday evening an impressive memorial service was held at the home with the Rev. W. Joyce Russell delivering the eulogy. W. A. Gunter was chairman.

The unit will hold its annual Poppy Day sale tomorrow. The imitation poppy flowers are made by disabled war veterans in hospitals, and the funds raised will be used for their benefit. Young women will sell them on the streets.

The committee in charge consists of Mrs. Allen, chairman, Mrs. George E. Banzhof, Mrs. Harry G. Spiker, Mrs. Harry D. Bogler, Mrs. Heyl D. Walker and Mrs. Vogel.

Summer Colony Planned In Bedford Vicinity

Plans to establish a new summer colony in the vicinity of Bedford, Pa., have been announced by the members of the Bedford Chamber of Commerce. Paul Young, president of the chamber, announced that Ralph Brown, of Bedford, has purchased a 465-acre tract along Route 220 on the Horseshoe Trail, about ten miles from Bedford. The owner plans to flood approximately 100 acres of the land to make an artificial lake and to build some 200 cottages.

Fair Going

By DIONIS GEPPERT

Your reporter is going to take you through each of the seven zones, of the New York World's fair, pointing out the most interesting things to see. For the benefit of those planning soon to visit the fair, do not come for at least three weeks as some of the foreign and state buildings are not open yet, also some of the concessions in the amusement area. However, every day there is a formal opening of another building, and by the end of June the entire fair will be completed.

For each day of fair going, it is a good idea for the visitor to obtain a copy of the official program titled "Today at the Fair". This paper is only five cents (some days free) and lists the specified time of day or evening for all special events. I. e. the fountain display of the Lagoon of Nations begins every evening at 9 o'clock.

The Lagoon of Nations is a large pool by the Court of Peace in the Government zone. At 9 o'clock, with a musical concert, the fountains of the lagoon become a spray of light and color; colors gradually changing tone in accord with the music. There are three large fountains; the central one ascends as high as seventy feet into the air. The color is formed by gas vapor and actual flame appears from the base of the fountains.

All of the exhibits in Zone two, the Communications and Business Systems zone, are absolutely free. In fact, many people do not realize that all of the exhibition buildings are free with the exception of the shows in the amusement area.

At 10:30 p. m. a similar display of color fountains occurs on Fountain lake in the amusement area, plus a magnificent display of fireworks which can be seen from all points over the fair grounds. The displays are presented nightly and are well worth seeing.

Has Large Pylons

The Communications building is fronted by twin pylons 160 feet high. On the facade of the building is Savage's mural showing means of communication. The focal exhibit displays the method of communication from earliest times up to modern. The building houses several exhibits. The central section forms a large lounge space with comfortable chairs and ashtrays, and comfort stations are found at the end of the building. Outside of the building is a locker-check system, for checking coats or packages.

The Bell Telephone building is a center of much attraction, due to the fact that certain winners are granted the privilege of telephoning anyone in the United States free of charge, being allowed to sepak for three minutes. The point is, though, the people seated in the audience may listen in on your conversation through receivers. You should hear the audience roar when the sailors put through a cross-country call!

The Radio Corporation of America is another place of much interest in this zone. Here is presented a demonstration of television. A movie film is transmitted from the top of the Empire State building to the R.C.A. building in the fair grounds. Through modern television sets we see views of the George Washington bridge, followed by a short on safety in driving.

Labor Official Arrives

Fort Hill Students Elect Boys To Head Next Year's Classes

Fort Hill students marched to the polls yesterday and elected a new Student Council Senate and officers for two classes.

Those elected to the senate are Jean Witherup, Scott Shannon, Edward Spear, Harry Fritz, Maxine Smith, Harold Tansell and Edna Mae Johnson.

Dog Show Profit To Aid Wildlife

Plans Near Completion For Show Here Aug. 6

Proceeds of Cumberland's eighth annual American Kennel Club All-Bred Dog Show will be offered to the Western Maryland Wildlife Foundation, it was announced last night as plans for the affair neared completion.

The funds will be donated to the Foundation for the purpose of studying, and financing conservation of wildlife in Western Maryland, according to the executive committee of the Western Maryland Kennel Club, which will sponsor the dog show at the fair grounds August 6.

Officers of the organization said that negotiations are underway to bring to the Cumberland show the finest superintendent and judges available in this area. They pointed out that rules of the American Kennel Club forbid announcement of superintendent or judges until after their formal approval by that body.

Complete details of the show, including prizes and entry requirements, will be ready for distribution late in June, it was said.

Club officials said that they expected more than 300 entries for this year's renewal of Cumberland's "Canine classic."

The last dog show held here, on November 6, 1937, attracted 227 entries of dogs representing thirty different breeds.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

Cumberland merchants are dickering, through the chamber of commerce, with a firm which wants to put on one of those big Toy Land parades, with huge inflated animals and a host of terrible and comic looking creatures big as houses. The kids go for such parades, and of course papa and mama goes for anything that Junior likes.

The parade can be obtained for considerably less than $1,000, because the outfit that puts it on will have an open date between parades in Charlotte, N. C., and Baltimore.

The big creatures are motorized, of course, but the local sponsor would have to furnish 157 workmen to help prod them along and get their fat, billowy sides inflated.

The dates offered Cumberland are November 20 or 27, and the idea is to get people downtown to do their Christmas shopping early. It would likely draw a big crowd, and, of course, a record traffic jam.

—o—

We understand now that the big fireworks display planned for July 4 at the fair grounds is a fizzle to date. Every one is for it, every one wants to see some money raised for the Community Cheest, but there is no one around to put up the $1,500 necessary to buy the fireworks.

Now if 10,000 persons could be induced to come see the hour-long display of celestial light and thunder, and pay two bits for same, the returns would be $2,500, which would buy all the fireworks and leave a tidy sum over for the Community Chest. Showmen say that at least 10,000 people could be brought out for the show, but there's still the element of risk.

The Community Chest can't afford to gamble with the funds already contributed to it. So far no other group has come forward willing to undertake this thrilling community enterprise. Too bad.

Hollywood Seeks Mayor's History But Dr. Koon Chuckles at 'Stardom'

Film producers, apparently, have finally decided that they don't necessarily need a glamour gal or a Bowery thug to make an entertaining motion picture.

Like Diogenes, one film outfit recently started going right to the source for reliable material and consequently it is not surprising to hear that they have finally come to the conclusion that not all public officials are necessarily corrupt and wallowing in sin.

The latest idea to sprout in the noodle of the film master minds is the production of a true-to-life film based on the biography of a representative mayor in a representative city.

Want Koon's Biography

And yesterday, the research department of Imperial Pictures, Inc., located Mayor Thomas W. Koon and requested him for a complete biography.

In a letter to Cumberland's veteran mayor, G. Bernhardt, of the Imperial staff, stated, "It is our plan to assemble in story form those actual activities and true experiences of a mayor which have the most appeal and the greatest dramatic value, without being an exaggeration in any way.

Want Honest Mayor

"So much has been written and so much has been seen in motion pictures of corrupt officials and corrupt politicians that we feel an honest portrayal of an honest personality would be a civic duty performed and more truthful entertainment.

"After a survey of the motion picture field, we firmly believe that a picture of this type would have great entertainment possibilities and a ready and wide circulation.

"We ask that you give us a complete biography of yourself with a series of interesting events in your career as mayor, which you believe will be of interest to the public. If you have any suggestions to make, we shall be only too happy to receive them."

Mayor Only Chuckles

Upon receipt of the letter, Mayor Koon chuckled a moment and then indicated that he had no time for writing biographies. He also indicated good naturedly that the biography wouldn't be written unless one of Cumberland's newspaper scribes wanted to transform himself into a scenario writer.

However, several persons who heard of the film company's request declared that the picture outfit had probably come to the right source for interesting material.

Dr. Koon has always been a double-barreled public servant inasmuch as he combines his duties as mayor with his practice as a physician. A doctor who has prescribed at sickbeds day and night as well as serving as mayor for twenty-three years might conceivably give Hollywood something to work with.

Who knows, perhaps Jean Hersholt, the man who played the part of Dr. Dafoe, may enact the life of Cumberland's mayor.

Woman Injured, Man Fined $50

Youth Claims Blow Only Accident

A 24-year-old Virginia avenue youth yesterday was fined $50 and costs in Trial Magistrates Court, although he denied striking a 21-year-old married woman in the hallway of her home last Monday night.

According to Mrs. Jane E. Chilcotte, Charles Hemmis, of First street and Virginia avenue, called at her home at 904 Lafayette avenue, last Monday night. Mrs. Chilcotte said that she was seperated from her husband.

The young woman testified that she and Hemmis were talking on the front porch of her home when he suddenly pushed her into the hallway and struck her on the mouth.

Tells Different Story

Hemmis, charged with assault and battery, told a different version regarding the episode. He declared that the woman obtained her swollen mouth and loosened teeth when his elbow accidentally collided with her face. The accident occurred when Mrs. Chilcotte stooped to pick up something she had dropped, he declared.

Trial Magistrate Frank A. Perdew listened intently as Hemmis related how he had taken Mrs. Chilcotte for an automobile ride in a borrowed car prior to the accident. He met her on the street, he declared.

When they returned from the ride, they met the friend from whom they had borrowed the car, Hemmis said. All three went out in the car to look for another girl, he said. Later, they left the friend and went to a beer parlor, the defendant declared.

After visiting the beer parlor, Mrs. Chilcotte accompanied him to his home, Hemmis said. They went there to listen to the radio, he told the court.

The accident occurred in his home, the defendant continued. Despite the fact that Mrs. Chilcotte had a badly bruised mouth, she remained for "one last kiss" before leaving, Hemmis said.

Magistrate Perdew said he had happened to notice Mrs. Chilcotte's mouth the morning the warrant was sworn out. He then fined Hemmis $50 and costs.

The defendant filed an appeal. He was not represented by an attorney.

Car Hits Child, Breaks Her Leg

Frostburg Girl Also Suffers Head Injuries

A four-year-old girl suffered severe injuries late yesterday afternoon when struck by a car as she played in the road in front of her home, on U. S. Route 40 just west of Frostburg.

The victim was Veronica Broadwater, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Broadwater. She suffered a broken right leg, a possible fractured skull, and severe contusions of the right arm when hit by an automobile driven by Edward L. Matticord, of Alliance, Ohio.

Attendants at Miners hospital, Frostburg, said her condition was not serious, and she is expected to recover.

Matticord, who was headed east, told State Trooper Carl G. Storm that the child suddenly darted into the path of his car and he was unable to stop in time to avoid striking her.

Officer Storm said that James Hugglestone, of 200 East Main street, Frostburg, told him that Matticord was driving at a "moderate rate of speed." Hugglestone was driving just behind the Ohio man, Storm said.

The scene of yesterday's accident on the east side of Big Savage mountain, about a half-mile west of Frostburg, is near the spot where James Forgach, 21, was killed when struck by a car on the night of May 3.

The only other action taken by the CIO body was the adoption of a resolution supporting the campaign against the occupational disease bill and backing plans for obtaining signatures to petitions asking a referendum on the bill.

State's Attorney Brands Attack On Him False

Garrett Co. Official Takes Up Feud With State Forester

Oakland, May 25 — State's Attorney Neil C. Fraley emphatically denied today the charges leveled against him from Baltimore by Walter J. Quick, deputy state forester.

Fraley invited Quick to come to Garrett county and help get evidence on the many so-called incendiary fires, "instead of sitting in the office in Baltimore and giving out interviews to the press containing false and misleading statements."

Fraley referred to recent newspaper stories in which Quick complained that officials of several counties had failed to cooperate with foresters in catching firebugs. Fraley was the only one specifically named.

Quick said Fraley had "gone back" on a promise to take to the March grand jury evidence against persons suspected of setting woods fires, making it impossible for him to have broken any promise, which he says he never made. The next grand jury is not until September.

The statement which Fraley issued today follows:

"The Associated Press dispatch appearing in the Cumberland News under date of May 23, quoting Walter J. Quick, deputy state forester, stating that I had gone back on my promise to take to the grand jury evidence against persons suspected of setting fires is absolutely false. I have never failed to bring to the grand jury any evidence that was ever submitted to me in a case investigated by the employes of the state forestry department.

Questioned Suspect

"The latter part of March a case was reported to me by the local forest guard and as a result of information furnished me I questioned twice a suspect. This information was not brought to me until after the March grand jury had just adjourned and obviously I had no opportunity to bring any evidence that was submitted to that grand jury.

"If there is the great number of forest fires of incendiary origin as claimed by Mr. Quick he would do better to come to Garrett county and make an effort to obtain evidence against those guilty of setting out fires instead of sitting in his office in Baltimore and giving out interviews to the press containing false and misleading statements."

Take Footprints

Quick reported last Friday approximately thirty forest fires were set in Garrett county, burning acres of timber. They were set, said, by two groups. He also said that this spring Garrett county wardens consulted the federal department of justice about means to gather evidence. They began to take foot prints found near fires. Several weeks ago they had footprints taken from those made by Jerry Kelly, 81 years of age, of near Sang Run, twenty miles northwest of Oakland, who was seen near where some fires occurred. Kelly was twice questioned but released for lack of evidence.

Being guilty of setting fires is a criminal offense," Fraley said. "Simply because a man is seen in the vicinity of a fire is not evidence he is guilty. There must be proof for a criminal offense. My position as state's attorney is to protect the innocent as well as to prosecute the guilty."

St. Mary's Sophomores To Give Morality Play Brought Up to Date

The scene of action is the waiting room of Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, where a group of college girls have agreed to meet in order to talk over events before boarding trains, some for a holiday's-end while others for their respective colleges.
